RED SOX CLASH IN REDLANDS

By MERTON E. BURKE.

Boston American Correspondent with Red Sox on Coast to Coast Tour.

Merton E. Burke.

REDONDO, Cal., March 6.—The Red Sox boys entered the finest young exposition of their whole coast to coast tour to-day when they visited far-famed Redlands to play the local team there.

Redlands is the liveliest bunch of municipal energy in this section of the map. It is one of those places where the residents tickle the ground about once in five years and then spend the rest of their time sitting on their bungalow verandas watching the monkeys gather the golden fruit which they in turn without aid of necromancy convert into golden eagles.

The people up there are planning a gala occasion for the Boston men and nothing but the finest will be officered for their entertainment.

There will be automobiles to take the team from the train, white them to the beautiful parks overlooking the immense orchard districts and to the wonderful packing houses.

Donovan Picks Out Janvrin.

Special accommodations are offered in the way of quarters. A bang up lunch is scheduled, and all told it looks like the real goods in the entertainment lines, and even the Sox, who have been feted all along the line, are sparring for permission to be members of the squad detailed for the trip.

Acting Manager Carrigan, after the cancellation of two more games yesterday on account of the rain, selected the men who will go to Redlands, as follows: Perry, Eagle, Priebke, Janvrin, Yerkes, Myers, Bautele, Carrigan, Nunnamaker, McHale, Collins, Dale, Hollis, Sawyer.

Other members, Frank Smith, Charles Smith, Clooney, Olmsbee, Moser and Hall, if he gets back on the job, will remain at Redondo for field practice.

The weather here and in San Francisco is very trying to the nerves of the treasury department. Mr. McBreen telephoned me that the weather up the coast is worse than it is here and he will return to this place in a day or two.

Cut Down Red Sox Squad.

OAKLAND, March 6.—It looks as if Manager Patsy Donovan would cut his squad down to thirty-two players before starting on the homeward trip. Patsy is keeping his plans under his hat like a good and wise manager should always do, but it looks mighty good betting that not many more than that number will take the Twentieth Century limited from Chicago to Boston for that game with dear old Harvard on April 11.

It is possible that Donovan will send two batteries to Washington ahead of time, but all the other boys will go back to dear old Beantown for the diamond scrap with the Crimson.

This entire training trip is not working as it should, nor like John L. and the rest of 'em figured it would. Far from it. A good, nice, pleasant day has been as rare as a pearl in an oyster shell, Mr. Weather Man does not seem to care whether the men get into shape or not, and the result is that the players have got mighty little work so far.

Talk about rain! The East was never in it. Every day a game is scheduled along comes one old kid J. Pluvius, forms an agreement with Mr. W. M., and there's nothing to it—the game is off.

MERRY IN SHADOW OF CHAIR

Before another sunrise, Wassili Ivankowski and Andrei Ispen, the Lynn bandits, will have been electrocuted at Charlestown for the murder of Thomas Landregan and James H. Carroll, both of Lynn, on the morning of June 25, 1910. Neither of the condemned men apparently is troubled by the thought that death is but a few hours away. Ivankowski spent much of to-day in writing. He has already penned his last message to his family in Russia. Ispeu, asked if he also wanted to write to anyone, replied: "Me no write, me no care." Ispeu smokes almost constantly. His one demand is for cigarettes. Both men sing and shout in their cells.

Father Malley of St. Mary's Parish, Charlestown, the kindly priest who acts as Catholic chaplain of the State Prison, is the only visitor the men have had since they were placed in the death cells. He was with them all day to-day.

Death Call Is Near.

It is less than a dozen steps from the cells in the death house to the electric chair, and then the bandits will soon be making the short journey that leads to the longer one. It is only a matter of a few hours when the guard will ask Wassili Ivankowski, the eighteen-year-old boy, the official last question, "Ivankowski, are you ready?"

This question will be asked of him shortly after midnight, as the law says that the execution must take place some time between the hours of midnight and sunrise.

An electrician arrives from New York this evening to perform the electrocution.

Earlier in the evening they will be given new black trousers, the left legs of which are slit from the bottom to the knee, to allow for the application of the electrodes.

They will have a long talk with Father Malley. He will be with them all this evening and an opportunity will be given them to make their last confession. This will be the very last act before they leave the death cell for the last time.

Earlier in the night a guard will prepare them for the ordeal. He will cut a spot on the heads of each to make room for the upper electrode that furnishes the combination for the direct current. They will then don the new black trousers, the striped prison shirts, a pair of new slippers and will await the last call.

Ivankowski will be called first, as he is in the cell nearest to the execution chamber, in which the electric chair is placed. Father Malley will meet him at the door of his cell and, walking between two guards, the death march will begin. It is a short march. Only ten steps separate Ivankowski's cell from the electric chair.

Execution Postponed.

It was expected that the execution of Ivankowski and Ispen would take place yesterday, this assumption being based on the curiosity seekers who gathered about the gates of the prison shortly before midnight, were disappointed. The postponement was delayed another twenty-four hours.

The crowd remained about the gates until one o'clock this morning.

The last Sunday on earth was spent by the two men, in preparation for the end. Father Malley was with them from early morning until late at night. For nap an hour he left them and that was in the morning, when he went to attend mass in the prison chapel.

NEXT HOUSE TO GO AFTER STEEL TRUST

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Searching inquiry into the existence and operations of the so-called "steel trust" will be one of the first actions taken by the incoming Congress, according to Representative Stanley of Kentucky. Mr. Stanley introduced a resolution in the closing days of the Congress just ended, providing for such an inquiry, but it failed of action on the final rush of the session. He declared today that he had contracted the assignment of the coming Congress and, with the Democrats already pledged to support such a resolution, the passage of the order is believed to be assured.

ELLIOTT TO HEAD MISSOURI PACIFIC

CHICAGO, March 6.—Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific railway, has decided definitely to accept the presidency of the Missouri Pacific, succeeding George J. Gould, according to reports in Chicago railroad circles. Mr. Elliott is known to have had an offer from the new interests in control of the road under consideration for some time, and it is understood that he will be elected at the annual meeting in St. Louis on March 14. It has been reported that Mr. Elliott would receive a salary of $100,000 a year.

BREAKS HEART TO SAVE HER CHILD

CHICAGO, March 6.—After lifting her baby to the platform of a street car, Mrs. Elizabeth Keech was unable to board the car herself before the machine moved. Mrs. Keech ran after the car for six blocks before the car was stopped. She staggered up to the conductor and sobbed for her child. When the conductor brought the little fellow out and placed him in his mother's arms she swooned. She was then removed to a hospital, where she died with the little one for whom she had bartered her own death, clasped tightly in her arms.

GENERAL ALARM FOR POLITICIAN

A general police order was sent out today to arrest on sight the former State Senator, for whom detectives have been looking in connection with alleged lumber frauds, and who has escaped arrest in such a remarkable manner.

All of the police captains and police inspectors of the city have been told to get the man. The hide and seek policy that has prevailed since the indictment against him was handed down has disgusted the city, and this feeling has finally reached police headquarters.

The amazing fact became known to-day that the indictment against the former State Senator was handed down by the Grand Jury as long ago as December.

District Attorney Angry.

It was learned to-day that the District Attorney's office and the police have been completely fooled, up to date, by the former Senator, upon whom, they believed, they could lay their hands at any time.

The indictment of John L. Sullivan of South Boston, and of the former Senator, were handed down at the same time. The police believed that they would have no trouble at all in getting what they consider "the man higher up," so they let him go his way until Sullivan was under arrest.

They began to hunt for the former Senator in earnest about two days ago. Attorneys for the man assured the police that he would show up in a few days, having had some little difficulty in raising the $5,000 bail that the District Attorney would ask for him.

These promises were not fulfilled, although on two nights police inspectors remained at police headquarters until midnight, waiting for the man. The detectives began to get rather restless along about the middle of last week, and scoured around some in the hope of running across the man, who is known to thousands of people in former Boston.

The detectives were told that the man wanted would show up Thursday—then Friday—then Saturday—then Sunday. But he did not appear.

Sure to Make Arrest.

There was an air of gloom and disgust at police headquarters to-day that you could cut with a case knife. Any one who should know what he is talking about made this statement and he was sharp and emphatic in his utterance:

"The police will get this man. They'll get him quick, too. I think he'll be arrested to-day. At least it will not be long before he is in custody."

The warrants for the man's arrest were first placed in the hands of Special Officer O'Neil and Inspector Wolf. But as every member of the police force of Boston knows who the man is now, if any blunderer sees him, he'll be brought to police headquarters.

EIGHT IN LOWELL COURT FOR BREAKS

LOWELL, March 6.—Eight men accused of various breaks, who were arrested here a week ago, appeared in police court to-day. At the request of their counsel seven of the cases were continued for a week, a bond of $800 for each being required. Police officials from Manchester, N. H., Concord, N. H., Salem, Dover, N. H., and Lawrence were present at the hearing. One of the prisoners, Walter White, was recognized by Sheriff Smith of Dover as the man who escaped from jail there on January 11 last. He was known there as Walter Stewart. He waived examination and left with Smith to finish out the rest of his term.

WORKMAN INJURED BY GRANITE BLOCK

Romeo Aggustilo, forty-three, of No. 88 Willard street, Quincy, was injured to-day at the Granite Railway quarries at East Quincy when he was assisting in the loading of two large granite blocks on a freight car. A block suspended in the air fell as a pulley slipped. The block striking Aggustilo, who was standing directly under it. The injured man was rushed to the Quincy Hospital.

GOV. DIX CALLS FOR END OF DEADLOCK

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—Governor Dix to-day demanded an early settlement of the senatorial situation. In a statement given out at the executive office he declared he had no controversy with any member of his party, but insisted that the deadlock be ended. This was called forth by the letter sent to Senator Sheehan, declaring he would stand pat for the race to succeed Chauncey M. Depew.

REBELS MARCHING UPON THE CAPITAL

BUENOS AYRES, March 6.—The revolutionary forces in Paraguay are marching upon Asuncion, the capital of the republic. The three battleships seized by General Jara, the government dictator, have been retaken. The rebels have seized a military depot, securing 9,000 guns, 2,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition. The revolutionary forces are gaining strength daily.

JOHN C. PELTON DEAD.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—John Colton, a native of Boston and a pioneer locator of California, died in poverty yesterday. He was born January 27, 1815.

JUDGE LOWELL DIES SUDDENLY

Judge Francis Cabot Lowell of the United States Circuit Court died early today at his home, No. 159 Beacon street. Death was due to a general breakdown, the result of overwork. He was fifty-six years old.

Judge Lowell was one of the foremost legal lights of New England, and was one of the best known Harvard men in the country. He was one of the fellows of the college corporation and a trustee of the Peabody Museum at Cambridge. He had been a president of the Unitarian Club, succeeding the late Governor Wolcott.

Francis Cabot Lowell was born in Boston, January 7, 1855. He was the son of George G. and Mary Ellen (Parker) Lowell. His father was also a judge. The son was educated in private schools and fitted for Harvard. He graduated from Harvard in 1876 and immediately entered Harvard Law School.

He graduated from the Law school in 1879. He then entered the law firm of Lowell, Stimson & Lowell. In 1880 he was elected to the Boston Common Council as a Republican and was re-elected for two successive years. In 1885 he was elected to the State Legislature. There he served on the Committees on Rules and Judiciary. The following year he was re-elected and served as chairman of the committee on ways and means the following year and also served on the rules and judiciary committee.

In 1898 Judge Lowell was appointed to the United States District Court bench by President McKinley. When the United States Circuit Court of Appeals was created in 1905 he received the appointment of Circuit judge. At the time of his appointment to the District Court Judge Frederick Dodge, now of that court, was spoken of for the position. When Judge Lowell was elevated to the Circuit Court Judge Dodge was appointed to succeed him in the District Court.

Judge Lowell was married in 1882 in New York. His wife was Miss Cornelia Prime Bayles.

MRS. GLOVER WINS FROM TOBY LE BLANC

The dispute between Toby LeBlanc and Mrs. Lillian M. Glover over the ownership of the Glover house on Main street, in Waltham, was ended to-day when Judge Pierce in the Superior Court dismissed the appeal taken by Toby LeBlanc from the decision of Judge Hitchcock, ordering him to convey the house to Mrs. Glover.

The house at the time of the Glover tragedy stood in the name of Toby. Mrs. Glover claimed that he only held it for her. She sought action in court to have him transfer it to her last November. Judge Hitchcock ordered this done. Toby LeBlanc through his lawyers appealed from the decision.

To-day Lawyer Francis M. Hayes, counsel for Mrs. Glover, brought a motion before Judge Pierce to have the appeal dismissed. There was no opposition from Toby and the appeal was dismissed, ending the case. The house is valued at $5,500.

DISHONOR PICTURE OF A WAR HERO

A handsome oil painting of Major Robert Anderson, the first hero of the Civil War, has been ignominously treated at City Hall. Major Anderson was the commander of the little group of soldiers who manned Fort Sumter when the latter place was fired upon in '61. The painting was a gift to the city. After occupying various places of honor it has been consigned to a place on top of an old book case in the Clerk of Committee's room. Recently some of the patriotic visitors to this room have noticed the neglect of the painting and accordingly have waxed indignant.

SWEETHEARTS DEAD IN SUICIDE PACT

NEWARK, N. J., March 6.—Harry D. Cox, a liveryman, and his wife, Winifred, who intended to make public to-day their secret marriage last June, were found dead in the unfurnished room which they planned to fit up for housekeeping. Gas was flowing from a heater in the kitchen. The police thought at first the double fatality was an accident, but after interviewing a woman at the home of Cox's parents, who said she was married to him twelve years ago, they began an investigation to determine whether the couple fulfilled a suicide pact.

LEGISLATOR DENOUNCES CIVIL SERVICE BOARD

Martin M. Lomasney hurled hot shot at the Civil Service Commission at one of the liveliest legislative hearings of the year held before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs in Room 240 at the State House to-day. The committee sat on several bills affecting Boston's charter. Lomasney spoke on two bills, both of which sought to take from the Civil Service Commission the right to approve appointments made by the Mayor.

The first of the two bills was introduced by ex-Representative David Manovitz, a Lomasney lieutenant. It took the power from the Civil Service Commission without bestowing it on any other body. The second bill introduced by the Mayor takes the power from the Commission and gives it to the City Council.

Lomasney showed no preferences for either bill. He only urged taking the power from the commission. In arguing for the bills he took up the recent affair between the commission and his brother, Joseph, and for the first time gave out the seven charges preferred against a Joseph Lomasney is a letter sent in the examination by Richard Bottomley of the Good Government Association. The Joseph Lomasney referred to in the letter, he said, was not his brother, and that he declared was admitted by his opponents.

Attacks Members of Boards.

Representative Lomasney took up each individual member of the commission and referred to them in this manner.

Member No. 1—One of the Mis rich who had to be taken care of with a job.

Member No. 2—Has to drink dotage.

Member No. 3—Ordinary, very ordinary, country lawyer.

These members have an extraordinary qualifications for their jobs," said Martin "In fact, they fall far short of the work they have to perform. The Mayor of Boston, in fact every Mayor that we ever had, stands head and shoulders above them for ability to select heads of departments."

Lomasney read the seven records against Joseph F. Lomasney as submitted to the Civil Service Commission. Today was the first time that it became known that there were seven records, as only one of them was his brother, Joseph F., the principal in this case, the charge had been dismissed for want of prosecution.

It was a rank case of intolerable liberty. The guilty Joseph Lomasney has no connection with the Ward 8 leaders.

Presents the Records.

November 17, 1900, Joseph Lomasney arrested for larceny. Fined $20.

February 4, 1891, Joseph Lomasney arrested for obstructing foot passage. Fined $5.

September 1, 1891, Joseph Lomasney arrested for assault and battery. Sentenced to serve three months in the House of Correction.

January 15, 1892, Joseph Lomasney arrested on the same charge. Fined $15.

In the same year, Joseph Lomasney arrested for assault and battery. Case dismissed for want of prosecution. (This is the record of which Martin's brother is the principal.)

In 1892, Joseph Lomasney, arrested for assault and battery with intent to rob. Case went to Superior court, January, 1893.

December 6, 1892, Joseph Lomasney arrested on the charge of attempting to rob with John Bowen. Case went to Superior court, January, 1893.

Refused to Prosecute.

"The only part of this record that concerned my brother was that where prosecution failed and the case was dismissed This case came as the result of an altercation in a voting booth," said Martin. "The warrant was not sworn out until several days after the altercation took place. Then after a time the man who swore to it cooled off and refused to prosecute."

Lomasney then declared that the letter containing the seven charges was a part of the Civil Service Commission records, although they denied to him that it was a part. He said that Lieutenant Hugh Lee, assigned to the District Attorney's office, went to the offices of the commission and there was given a letter, written on their official paper, addressed to Mr. Bottomley and asking what the commission should do with the letter he sent them. Lieut. Lee declared Mr. Lomasney, they admitted that the matter had been referred to them, and the original therefore became a part of their records.

Continuing the argument, Representative Lomasney attacked the people who foisted the new charter upon the city.

"The charter of 1909," he said, "was a part of a plan to turn the city of Boston over to the 'highbrows.' They submitted two plans to the people. The people chose the less of two evils.

MR. M'NARY IS SET RIGHT

Former Congressman William S. McNary, who was quoted in the Sunday AMERICAN, as saying that the Elevated should oppose corrupting officials, declares he was misquoted. Below is printed what Mr. McNary tell what he did say and gives an explanation of his ideas on what the Elevated should do. Mr. Mc Nary said:

"In an interview published in the Sunday AMERICAN, either through a misunderstanding of what I said or an unfortunate choice of words on the part of the reporter in recording my idea in referring to the Elevated railroad, it was stated that, 'if the Elevated road would cease corrupting officials and decode its attention to improving its system,' etc.

"I did not use the word 'corrupting' nor did I intend to convey the impression that the Elevated road was engaged in the corruption of officials. The statement which I made was this: 'If the Elevated road and the officials would pay no attention to influencing committees and officials and legislature as regards the details of rapid transit measures, but would devote their ability and intelligence to making a comprehensive system of improvement and development of its subway and elevated lines, removing dead ends such as the East Boston tunnel, doing away with that destroying loops such as Park street and Scollay square, providing a complete system of transfers and in fact a complete system downtown so that no one improvement is finished another could be begun, and then the system be developed comprehensively giving equal service to all districts of the city, it would find that the public would pay no attention to commissions and the different organizations would give it all that it wants and back it up in all of its plans.

"The elevated should devote its attention to the problems of Boston proper and the immediate Metropolitan district, and not attempt to stretch out into the country, but by developing its own rich field it we did gain public support and confidence and make its securities so valuable that they would be among the strongest and best in the country."

YOUTH OVERCOME IN ROOM BY GAS

Had there been a bigger supply of gas in the 25-cent gas meter at his home, No. 11 Lindall place, West End, Edward Avoss would have been asphyxiated early to-day. As it was, he was overcome and is in the Massachusetts General Hospital and is expects to be out in a few days. Avoss is nineteen. He is a great reader. He generally reads late. He first went to bed but thought he turned off the gas last night. He simply turned it partly off and left gas escaping.

COL. B. F. GODDARD IS DEAD, AGED 72

PLYMOUTH, March 6.—Colonel Benjamin F. Goddard, ex-chief of the police, is dead, at the age of seventy-two. Colonel Goddard was born April 4, 1839, in Plymouth, and moved with his parents to Boston when a young boy. He was a member of the famous old Sixth Massachusetts in its memorable trip through Baltimore. He re-enlisted twice, the last time as captain of the company which he organized.

He was seven years lieutenant colonel of the Sixth Regiment. Colonel Goddard was chief of police for seven years.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the —in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

BROKERS ARE PUT ON TRIAL

Assistant District Attorney Weliber declared to-day in outlining the case against four men connected with the defunct stock brokerage firm of Sedergut, Barry & Co., who were placed on trial in Judge Jenney's court, on the charge of larceny and conspiracy, that the amount involved would total nearly $1,000,000.

This statement came as a surprise to those in the court as it had heretofore been reported that the losses shared by more than 1,000 patrons of the firm scattered throughout New England, would not amount to more than half that amount.

The defendants are Arthur H. Sedergut, D. Eustace Bigelow, John F. Barry and Harry F. Curtis. There is a fifth defendant but he has not been arrested. It is the biggest case of the kind that has been tried in Boston in many years.

The defendants are charged with keeping what is known as a bucket shop. Their main place was in Boston, with more than a dozen branches in this section of the country, New York and other cities. Many of their patrons were women. There are more than 100 indictments against the accused men.

Big Array of Lawyers.

The best legal talent obtainable has been secured to get the defendants out of the serious trouble. Sedergut and Bigelow are represented by Lawyers Henry M. Hurlburt and Henry Herrick Bond, the latter being a son of the late Judge Bond and a brother of formerly secretary of the Boston City Council, represents John F. Barry and Thomas W. Proctor and Robert C. Mason appear for Harry F. Curtis. The prosecution is in the hands of Assistant District Attorney A. C. Weliber and Charles F. Smith, special counsel.

Scores of witnesses have been summoned, among them many women.

A committee selected to look into the failure shortly after it happened in May, 1909, reported that either Mr. Sedergut had withdrawn from the firm $53,000 for personal expenses and that he had "allowed his wife $18,000 a year for household money."

Bigelow made a hard fight to escape arrest, claiming that he was a citizen of New York. The fact that he had been in the habit of buying his riding breeches and other clothing in Boston and that he had been a frequent patron of Boston hotels served to indict Governor Hughes to grant the District Attorney's request for extradition, and the young man was brought to this city a prisoner.

Jury Is Selected.

At 11 o'clock the jury was completed and sworn in. It consisted of the following:

Frederick J. C. Brady, clerk, No. 715 Washington avenue, Revere.
Andrew A. Campbell, carpenter, No. 6 Chauncy place Cavanaugh, district, No. 73 Sterling street.
Joseph W. Chambers, druggist, No. 37 Brimmer street.
Charles Dennis, polisher, No. 222 Dennis street.
Edward C. Gifford, pattern maker, No. 363 East Seventh street.
Thomas Gilfoil, conductor, No. 224 Dudley street.
Edward W. Mannix, carpenter, No. 3 Westford place.
John McMahon, designer, No. 33 Wenham street.
James H. Murray, painter, No. 102 Gosford street.
Herbert E. Small, wood carver, No. 346 East Fifth street.
Martin L. Scriggs, jeweler, No. 20 East Norfolk street.

30 ASLEEP OVER BURNING STORE

Seven families, numbering thirty souls, women and children, slept peacefully in the tenement building at No. 78 Chelsea street, North End, early to-day, while flames were licking up the walls of the cigar and confectionery store on the first floor. Before the tenants had been aroused from their slumbers by the fire department gong the use of chemicals. The extinguishment did not last long, after some of the occupants in night attire had hurried to the street to tell the fire department apparatus driving off.

The fire broke out in the front store, which is owned by Mrs. Kate Cohen. Mrs. Cohen and her four children live on the second floor, immediately above her store. She was awakened by the police. The damage was slight.

WEST VIRGINIA MUST PAY $7,182,000 DEBT

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The United States Supreme Court to-day decided that West Virginia must pay Virginia $7,182,000. This terminates the famous and long-standing State debt case, though the question of interest was left open by the court.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

MELBER POISON TRIAL OPENED

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—With women crowding the court room the trial of Mrs Edith Melber, accused of murdering her five-year-old son, George, by giving him carbolic acid while he was pleading for a drink of water, was called before Judge Howard in criminal court today. The woman after poisoning her boy left his body in a bog on the outskirts of Albany. Her counsel has prepared a defense of "insanity" contending that because of her fecundity and hardships in after life she is not legally responsible for the death of her little son.

The State will try to prove that Mrs. Melber killed her child that she might marry again, her first husband being dead. The State subpoenaed a number of witnesses who will show that Mrs. Melber had posed as a childless widow to a young Schenectady draughtsman with whom she was in love.

Other witnesses among them relatives of her late husband will tell of the defendant's life in Schenectady and other New York State cities after her husband's death. On account of the manner in which the little child was killed, as detailed in Mrs. Melber's own confession, it was the opinion that great difficulty would be experienced in securing an unbiased jury. At the trial it was said today that if a woman showed no signs of fear or matter, even what responsibility of the lifeless child looming before her. She ate a hearty breakfast and declared she was ready to go to trial any time.

SAILOR IS LOST IN GALE OFF HATTERAS

The fishing schooner Wandrake came in Tuesday with the body of Wallace Worthe, master for the death of Wallace Worthe, of the fishing crew, who was carried from his dory and drowned off Hatteras last Wednesday. When the gale broke in the last named Worthen's death left four of Charlie's duties were one. The schooner was manned only by Captain Charles Worthen, the cook and spare hand. The three men put out in the dories. Worthen's dory was two miles from the schooner's. Captain Nickerson saw Worthen rising a sail on the dory. Picking up his men in dories one after another, Captain Nickerson and his two men worked to reach Worthen's direction, but the dory capsized before the Wandrake covered the distance. Worthen was six. He was thirty-one years old and left a wife and four children in Pubnico, N. S.

SPECIAL QUERY FOR WEST POINT CADETS

WASHINGTON, March 6.—A special examination of candidates for appointment as Cadets in the West Point Military Academy has been ordered by the War Department, to take place May 2, at a number of military posts throughout the country. Explanatory of the order the statement issued from the general staff calls attention to the fact that for a number of years the Cadet Corps has been 25 to 85 per cent. below its full quota.

DOCTOR SUICIDE IN DRUG STORE

PROVIDENCE, March 6.—Harold C. Leech, a practising physician, living at No. 220 Elmwood avenue, committed suicide today by shooting himself in the temple while in Crawford's drug store in Elmwood avenue.

Leech came into the store to-day, and after purchasing a box of cigarettes as was his custom, passed into the prescription department in the rear.

A minute later, the clerk, Howard Thayer, heard the report, and rushing into the back room, found Dr. Leech on the floor, unconscious and scarcely breathing. A revolver which was always kept on a shelf to guard against possible holdups was found near him, with one chamber empty. The Rhode Island Hospital Ambulance was sent for, but Dr. Leech died shortly after the arrival of the physician, without regaining consciousness.

It is supposed that Dr. Leech was brooding over the death of his mother last December. Medical Examiner Clifford Gray, who viewed the body, is of the opinion that the act was premeditated, and that Dr. Leech, who may have been more or less unbalanced, acted upon an impulse since Leech, an oculist, brother of the deceased, took charge of the body. This is the fifth suicide in Providence in ten days.

DISCHARGED AND THEN ARRESTED

When Elizabeth Brennan was discharged as a patient from the City Hospital today she was immediately arrested by Policeman Bellevue of the Brighton police station on the charge of murdering her infant child. She was taken to the Brighton Police Court on that charge, waived examination and pleaded guilty. She was held without bail. The woman is thirty-two years old and married. The baby that on the evening of February 25 she gave birth to was found dead at No. 246 Market street, Brighton, as Brennan gave birth to the child and not it from the floor down an exit. Its feeble cries were heard by Mrs. Mary Hall, who lives in the basement floor and found the infant, which had before it was born. Mrs. Hall reported it. Miss Brennan was arrested and when to the hospital.

CREW OF BOSTON SCHOONER IN PORT

Word reached the office of the Coastwise Transportation Company, No. 33 Broad street, today that Captain Arey and seven men of the schooner J. C. Selling 14 Coats A Minute!

115 Coats—All We Had in This Lot—Closed Out in 8 Minutes

Here are the Facts: There were just 115 Coats—50 for Women and 65 for Girls—We stated this plainly to avoid disappointment. When the doors were opened at 11 A. M. (after Stock-taking Sale) women came through every entrance to the Tunnel Bargain Basement. The girls' coats were on one rack, the women's on another, and so great was the crowd of eager buyers that in just 8 minutes not one Coat remained.

A Few Women "Speculated"

on these Coats—that is, they found that Filene prices were so low that they immediately turned around and sold them to other women standing near for more than they paid.

Moral:

Watch the Filene Tunnel Bargain Basement closely so as not to miss the Bargains every day. Sometimes they are advertised—sometimes not—THE NEWSPAPER ANNOUNCEMENTS CAN'T TELL OF HALF THE CHANCES, and besides, some lots sell out so quickly there is no opportunity to advertise them. Remember that Anything that DOESN'T sell out quickly Is Automatically Reduced—so prices must be low—ALL THE TIME.

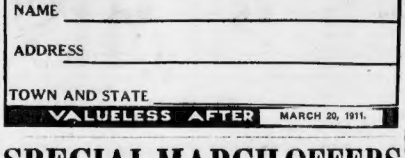
SPECIAL MARCH OFFERS



Power dory "Gurnet," built by Atlantic Company of Amesbury and offered as one of the prizes in District Three in AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest.

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

A stranger once walked with impunity Up and down a certain community, Till a widowwoke Shed. Stranger, this is a snap.

You've got old college friend, Opportunity."

"Too bad," says some cheerful candidate in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Contest, "poor old Contest Editor's gone dippy. He's writing Limericks."

Guess again. The Contest Editor isn't dippy, not yet—though he may buy a ticket for Dementa if some of you candidates don't quit writing illegibly on your subscription blanks and making needless mistakes.

The Contest Editor has merely taken a little whirl into Limerick-land in order to impress on you candidates in another way the fact that OPPORTUNITY is right at your elbow as he never was before.

He goes by various names, does old Opportunity. Just now, so far as you candidates in this big Contest are concerned, his name is "Special March Offer."

SPECIAL MARCH OFFER, don't forget it. It's a double offer, too. This makes Mr. Opportunity twins, as it were. Consider him both kinds of specials.

Big Chance in March.

The first of the Opportunity twins in this March offer is the special vote bonus given for each and every lot of ten subscriptions turned in between March 1 and March 31, inclusive.

The second of the Opportunity twins in this special March offer is a 1911 automobile runabout, to be given to the candidate who polls the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION during March.

If ever Opportunity came double to a candidate, it does in this March offer. You are not only offered a splendid prize for a single month's extra effort, but you are given a chance at the same time to increase your voting strength manifold.

And the beautiful part of it is that, when you are piling up vote credit for yourself through this special bonus offer, you are all the time increasing your standing in the main contest.

Look at it from that angle. You are offered a prize of an automobile merely to work harder toward other prizes. If that isn't an incentive then there is no such word.

You MUST keep that main contest always in mind, with its $35,000 worth of prizes. There are 1,000 prizes in all.

The capital prize alone is ample reward for years of work. But some fortunate, deserving candidate will win it by the middle of next June. It is a home, an $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

Then come other splendid prizes, automobiles, pianos, motor boats and so on through the long list.

The better your March work, the nearer you are to winning that capital prize or one of the other big rewards. This month is the bright and shining time in which to get subscriptions and especially special vote bonus as many times as you can. This is no argument. The Contest Editor is TELLING you something.

Splendid Dory a Prize.

Just to change the subject a bit, give attention a minute to that Atlantic dory motor boat offered as one of the prizes in District Three (Massachusetts, except Boston, Greater Boston and that part of the State west of the Connecticut River).

The Atlantic dories built by the Atlantic Company of Amesbury have long been used as comfortable pleasure boats. The Atlantic dory offered in this contest is the "Gurnet," taking its name from the Gurnet dory type of boat.

This boat is built with the introductory dippy, not yet—though he may buy a ticket for Dementa if some of you candidates don't quit writing illegibly on your subscription blanks and making needless mistakes.

PLAN A SHORT EXTRA SESSION

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Democratic leaders in the House have agreed upon a tentative plan for the special session to be convened on April 4. The House Democrats probably will pass the Canadian reciprocity agreement, revise the wool and possibly part of the cotton schedule of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, and will then pass a bill reducing duties on about one hundred items, all necessaries of life, including certain articles of wearing apparel. With this accomplished, the Democrats, according to present plans, will postpone a general revision of the tariff until they have had an opportunity to make a more complete investigation. This would make the extra session a short one, probably about thirty days.

There is a possibility that the proposition of amending the United States Constitution so as to permit of the direct election of United States Senators also will be taken up in the coming special session.

The only other legislation that is likely to be touched by the Democrats in the special session is a reapportionment bill. This bill, increasing the House membership to 433, failed in the Senate in the closing hours chiefly through the opposition of Senators Root and Penrose. The passage of a reapportionment before next year would result in a considerable advantage to the Democrats, as it would make it possible for them to redistrict several States which may fall into the hands of Republicans next Fall.

With the aid of Republican insurgents the Democrats can dominate the Senate for with all vacancies filled that body will stand fifty Republicans and forty-two Democrats. Recently their actions in the past there are at least five insurgents who can be willing to line up with the Democrats in the revision of the Payne-Aldrich law.

The action of Senator Bailey in resigning suddenly from the Senate Saturday and then recalling the resignation has served to explode a new cleavage in the Democratic minority in the Senate. On the one side will be ranged the Senate Democrats find themselves split into warring factions, Senator Bailey is at the head of one faction and Senator Stone of Missouri is leading the other. The line of clearance will be drawn in the Democratic caucus. In the alignment against Senator Bailey is his colleague, Senator Culberson of Texas. The revolt against Senator Bailey's nominal leadership has been growing for some time, and it will probably be stronger in the new Senate than it was in the old. Nearly all of the new Senators are expected to range with the anti-Bailey faction. An known exception, however, will be Senator Watson of West Virginia. His colleague, Senator Chilton, also may join the Bailey faction.

BRINGS IN ANOTHER COD TRAWL SALMON

March 6 is salmon anniversary day aboard the fishing schooner Gladys and Nellie. A year ago to-day the Gladys and Nellie brought to Gloucester the first Eastern salmon ever caught on a cod trawl in Eastern waters, so-far as the memory of trawl fishermen went. This salmon was caught by "Mike" O'Donnell, the fish dealer, who will pay Fanny prices for fresh fishes any time. When the Gladys and Nellie came in at T wharf to-day, Captain Frank Watts had an anniversary salmon for O'Donnell, caught on a cod trawl like the one a year ago and caught on the same fishing ground, the Middle Bank. O'Donnell promptly bought the codtrawled salmon, which weighed twelve pounds.

Fresh Air —in Plenty
Fleah-Producing Food —in Plenty and SIROLIN

PLENTY of oxygen-filled air, sleep in a well-ventilated room, regular, gentle, lung-expanding exercise, nutritious foods, and—SIROLIN. In few words, that is the advice given to lung and throat sufferers who consult the eminent specialists of Europe. If it were possible to place before the American people the private records of European physicians, they would at once appreciate the importance of this great Swiss remedy in the treatment of both serious and simple lung and throat affections.

It is seldom that a preparation as important as Sirolin is sold direct to the public—but the fact that self-diagnosis is simple in affections of the throat and lungs and Sirolin is absolutely harmless (without a trace of narcotic or habit-forming drug) makes it possible to distribute it direct to the sufferer through his local druggist.

Coughs, Colds and Bronchial Affections yield quickly to Sirolin—disagreeable symptoms promptly disappear, the appetite improves and these apparently trifling ailments are prevented from developing into serious maladies—Catarrhs, Pneumonia, Consumption.

In deep-seated pulmonary diseases the favorable action of Sirolin is no less marked—coughing rapidly decreases, weakening night-sweats disappear, the appetite becomes keen, the weight of the body increases (12 to 15 pounds gain in a short time are often recorded) the increase in tubercle bacilli decrease, the appearance greatly improves, and the patient quickly returns to normal strength. Sirolin as a preventive, Sirolin as a remedy, should be in every home.

Sirolin is now for sale by Physicians druggists.

CAMORRA TRIAL JURY DRAWING

VITERBO, Italy, March 6.—The work of drawing the second and probably the last panel of talesmen for the trial of the forty-one Camorrists, including the Mafia leader, Enrico Alfano, alias "Erricone," began to-day in the Civil Court. This is the preliminary step in the greatest criminal litigation of the century in which secrets of this great international band of terrorists will be exposed to the world's horrified gaze.

Although the accused are technically charged with complicity in the murder of Gennaro Cuocesio and his wife, "The beautiful Sorrentina," the Crown's counsel plan to bring to light secrets of dark crimes which have baffled the authorities of the world for many years.

The trial will start on Saturday morning in the Assize Court for Viterbo, unless there are legal entanglements in the meantime, which is hardly likely.

The judge of the civil court is experiencing the utmost difficulty in securing quota from which the twelve jurors who will sit in the Criminal Assize Court can be selected. Fear of the revenge and of terror into the hearts of the natives, and or prejudice as causes for exemption.

Recent agents have begun to arrive in Viterbo from other countries, including America. The inns of Viterbo and the surrounding country have become full to overflowing with life.

The army of lawyers who will defend the forty-one defendants are expected within a day or two. Some of them being on the ground already for conference with the prisoners who are confined under heavy guard in the Viterbo Prison.

King Victor Emmanuel, who is largely responsible for the long investigation which resulted in the arrest of the forty-one, is taking a keen interest in the progress of the preparations, and has given orders that a troop of Italian soldiers be allowed at the disposal of the Viterbo authorities to assist in the collection of evidence, and especially of Marshal Pagezuri, the brave Carabineer, who, disguised as a laborer, secured confessions which will be of great use to the State.

PUT BACHELORS ON UNFAIR LIST?

Mrs. Candacis Smith is happy today because of the cordial reception given her by the delegates to the Boston Central Labor Union when she asked on her new bill to tax bachelors at the C. L. U. meeting in Wells Memorial Hall. Not that the labor men listened her bill, for they didn't, but because she "gave them something to think about," as she stated in the course of her address. Here are a few of the "thinks":

"Why is celibacy on the increase among organized labor union men in Massachusetts? Is it because of the high cost of living and the uncertainty of the labor market?

"Have the housing conditions of the congested cities of this Commonwealth anything to do with the disinclination of bachelors to enter the married state?

"What reply have trades union members to make to President Eliot's public statement, that in order to save our young men from disease, every man should marry at the age of twenty-one? Dr. Eliot is looked up to as the foremost educator in this country, and his charges are serious.

"Are the marriageable girls of the day to blame for the present decline in the number of marriages?

"Should the State aid matrimonial candidates by helping them to own homesteads?"

After listening to Mrs. Smith, the labor men voted to grant the request made by the Federation of Protestant Churches of Greater Boston to seat fraternal delegates from the Federation in the C. L. U. Labor Union, and while she didn't say so in so many words, Mrs. Smith evidently approved of the suggestion as it would then be easier to marry off the bachelor labor men. With union ministers, willing spinsters, and a tax on bachelors, old-maidism would go speedily out of existence in the labor circles of Boston.

The labor men also voted to elect a committee of ten to build a labor temple in this city, the committee being Frank H. McCarthy of Cigarmakers' Union, Harry F. Jennings of Teamster Drivers' Union, John F. Kennedy of Sheet Metal Workers' Union, Fred J. Kneeland of Painters' Union 11, Arthur M. Huddell of Holstiing and Portable Engineers' Union and agent of the Building Trades Department, John C. MacDonald of Elevator Constructors' Union, A. J. Howlett, agent of Carpenters' District Council; Edward F. Connelly of Lamplighters' Union, Miss Anna T. Bowen of Cigar Factory Strikers' Union, Miss Lida McFeeters, secretary of Union Label section of the C. L. U.

JACKSON GIRL, WHO LED BATTLE FOR TUFTS DINNER

GIRLS WIN IN DINNER FIGHT

The fight by the girls of the senior class of Jackson College, the woman's branch of Tufts College, ley by Miss Adeline Sielberg, to have the Jackson girls present at the annual banquet, will come to a triumphant issue Friday night.

On that night the senior banquet will take place at Riverbank court with the Jackson girls participating for the first time in ten years.

On that same night there will be a "stag" banquet at the Hotel Dreyfus for disgruntled Tufts seniors who refuse to take part in any mixed affair. Miss Sielberg and the other Jackson girls cannot prevent the disgruntled ones from holding a "stag" part from the main banquet. But they have forced the majority to allow the girls to take part in the main event.

Co-eds Barred Hitherto.

For the past ten years the Tufts boys have held their senior banquet without the presence of the "co-eds." Last Fall, when Jackson School was set apart for girls at Tufts College both girls and boys said they were glad of it.

In November a senior banquet committee was appointed. It consisted of R. P. Wise of Newton, chairman; Miss A. Adeline Sielsberg, secretary of the class; Clifford E. Williams, class marshal; A. H. Wyllie of Taunton and R. J. Neagel of Medford.

Miss Sielsberg, the only girl on the committee, quickly saw that there were plans afoot to "freeze out" the girls as usual. She immediately notified other girls and a campaign was begun to enlist class votes for a "mixed" banquet.

When the matter came up in class meeting there was heated discussion. When the forty-two ballots were counted it was found that fourteen had a mixed affair, while fourteen girls had voted for a "stag." The "stag" contingent took it upon it stalked over to the other side of the hall and voted back by itself at a separate banquet. This separate one is the "stag," which will be held at the Dreyfus Friday night at the same time that the "mixed" banquet and dance takes place in Riverbank court.

President Indorses "Stag."

President Hamilton of Tufts has come out with a statement favoring the "stag," but that will not prevent the girls and their supporters from enjoying their "mixed" gathering. Speakers at the "mixed" assembly will include Joseph E. T. Mann of Boston, toastmaster; Elmer L. McPhee of Winchester, football manager; Harold O. Hallupe of Everett, Bernard E. Gray of West Somerville, Mark H. Houghton of Boston, Miss Marjorie Patterson of Franklin, and Miss Marion Shorter of Winthrop. The guests of honor will include Dean Wren of the faculty of arts and sciences and Mrs. Wren.

Allen F. McLane of Roxbury, senior president, will give the address of welcome at the "mixed." Clifford E. Williams will be toastmaster. Other speakers will include: Irving R. Shaw of Palmer, Joseph J. Hisley of Lowell, Leroy J. Jackson of Marlboro, William J. McKenna of Winthrop, captain of the baseball team, and James H. Flies of Portland.

This week fifteen of those at the meeting will call upon Governor Foss and ask him to intercede in the woman's behalf.

TETRAZZINI ON MARRIAGE

NEW YORK, March 6.—"Children? I would not have them and sing. Sentiment! think has them? Ah, yes, but she is a German. Germans breathe, laugh, sing, eat, drink, have children. In fact, with the Germans children are necessary as eating and music as natural as children. Italians, my country people, look upon the voice as dedicated to God. A great voice belongs to the people. Children, to the Lalin races, are like art. Art cannot serve two masters, I sing."

Mme. Tetrazzini thus expressed her opinion as to marriage and its relation to art.

"I say marriage," continued the prima donna, "because, although married myself, I still believe that marriage should not be childless. It is very tragic when it is so. I am so unhappy. A singer is always unhappy—that is a woman singer."

Why She Must Laugh.

"I laugh," cried she, "over the follies I haven't said which I see in quotation marks. I don't believe, for instance, that singers can breed singers. Voices are as rare as beautiful children, and much more difficult to raise. I would prefer to take a chance on bringing my voice than reproducing it in my children.

"Let's talk of real things—the serious things of your country. I believe for instance, that California has more art real response to art than any part of the United States. It expresses the Latin of the race. It has sunshine in its veins—music in its voice—laughter in its life. It is an aspect—responsive to fun—to mimetic.

"I have never in my whole life seen—nor do I expect to see in the years to come—more wonderful assembly than greeted me on Christmas evening in San Francisco, thousands upon tens of thousands packed thick in the glow of an almost Summer evening in Midwinter—and that, Tetrazzini, is a love-necked gown, stood for them.

"Ah, the enthusiasm, the life—the warmth—the beauty of it all—and more than all—the heart and soul of that beautiful people.

"Never have I seen true love of art more exquisitely, more sincerely, more profoundly expressed.

Sang the Very Best.

"I was in a heaven of happiness, and I sang at request 'The Last Rose of Summer,' as an encore as I never sang it, and will never sing it again, and the people called me an 'angel,' everything beautiful, and I felt like an angel and everything beautiful and lovely. That's it. It is not what one does—it is what one gets from the thing one meets. I put in my voice what I felt of heart and soul in that great throng.

"The diva has a few jolts to hand to her old chum, Oscar Hammerstein. This is what she said:

"Ah, poor Messrair Hammerstein. He is dead—dead to me—dead to the world of opera!" She signed stirringly and crossed her hands over the front of her extra lace dress. "He is a failure in London before he starts. And he will have no Lotus to help him as he had before, so what will he do? That thirty thousand dollars I have has to put in the bank until our suit is settled. He will see that—ah, no. It will all come to me with four per cent interest added. Poor Messrair Hammerstein.'

"Why do you think he will be a failure in his London venture?"

Criticises Opera House.

"Because, what does he know of London or London taste? It takes years to feel the pulse of London, but Hammerstein thinks he can go over there and go along as fast as he used to roll a cigar. His opera house is out of the way. It is like building an opera house in Harlem. And where are his artists? He says he has Melba and Calve, but they are the world afire. Oh, la, la!" Her scorn was great—and Hammerstein thinks he can bluff things through, but he cannot," she went on. "The public may come once—twice—but no, no! After all, Hammerstein knows little of opera, and the atmosphere was of the music halls—first an oratio, then a snake dancer. We were furious.

As for Chicago, she had met great enthusiasm over there, she said.

"Then you wouldn't say, 'Down Chicago?'" was asked.

Tetrazzini looked shocked. "Who said that?" she asked.

"Mary Garden."

"Oh, Mary Garden," and she smiled. "Oh, if she said that it was because the Oratio was only half full when she sang there."

WALLING'S WIFE GIVES DEFINITION OF LOVE

NEW YORK, March 6.—"I believe wholly, absolutely, passionately, in romantic love.

"I believe in perfect freedom of divorce, so that when one party to a marriage finds his love dead the marriage may be automatically dissolved at that moment.

"I believe a simple registration of the intent of two persons to live together is the marital relation to be preferable to a religious ceremony.

"I do not believe in free love.

"My only religion is my Socialist creed."

Such, in brief, is the conception of love, marriage and divorce held by Mrs. Anna Strunsky Walling, author and Socialist.

Worn by Trial Strain.

Seated in her parlor Mrs. Walling described her hopes for the future social structure. Particularly was she anxious to make clear her ideas as to the relations between man and woman.

Mrs. Walling looked worn from the strain of the $100,000 breach of promise suit brought against her husband, William English Walling, by Anna Bertha Grunspan, Paris shopgirl. Mrs. Walling had done much to help the girl in her husband's side, and the ordeal had exhausted her.

But she had learned to the logic nestled her heart her imagine deserted her; her even the ecstatic enthusiasm and expressive gestures emphasized her arguments.

"Yes," she said, "I believe wholly in romantic love because I think the desire to tense your personal romantic love is the surest defense to your love for socialistic ideals.

"And I believe in monogamy—no one should have more than one spouse in a lifetime. I am sure that without any compulsion, without any restraint of law, the normal individual will naturally and voluntarily cling to one spouse. It takes more than a lifetime to understand what love is. Instead of the idea that romantic love is a temporary nature, my idea is quite the opposite. It grows with everything in life. The fires of life themselves feed the flames for life is the fuel for such a love.

Physical and Marital Love.

"What proportion does the physical bear to the spiritual and mental in romantic love?"

"I would say that one cannot divide it up like that," Mrs. Walling answered quickly. "One loves one's lover absolutely in the physical bonds, because the entirety of love is absolute and you love him spiritually because the physical love is absolute.

"How do you think the marital relation should be adjusted?"

"I do not believe in a marriage ceremony. A simple registration, declaring that two persons are to live together in the marital relation, is better. For me there is no significance in ceremony. What the law has significance in the registration of a marriage—the making it established."

"Two persons simply registering, declaring they have become mates!"

She Is Opposed to Secrecy.

"No, not that. I think that is just about as pretentious and sensational as the ceremony. I do not believe that there should be anything secret in marriage. I do not like the idea of two people living together and pretending that they are not man and wife, when they are. If they are sure of their love they would not object to that love being known, so far as they know, forever. It is psychologically untrue to believe in a temporary relationship in love."

"Do you or any of your associates believe in 'free love'?"

Doesn't Like "Mates."

"No, we do not. Most Socialists are just as conservative on this subject as other people. I should say that most marriages one sees nowadays are just lukewarm friendships. I do not like the word 'mates.' Many Socialists prefer it, but for me it is too cold. Husband and wife or comrade-lovers, I prefer."

But if we believe in absolute freedom of divorce; that a person should merely have the state that he is weary, that for some reason the relation has ended and the union is dissolved. From that moment it is dissolved before even an expression is given of that fact. When it is ended mentally it is ended. It is the last crime on earth to profess love for an individual when the love is gone."

"What is your religion, Mrs. Walling?"

"I have no religion, absolutely none, other than my Socialistic creed, and my belief in the social order."

Mrs. Walling explained that she is not one of the regulation "Sex" type, with the identity of the individual in the community lost. She believes in giving every opportunity to give expression to his own individuality. At the same time she believes in preserving the body social, not in destroying it, as would the Anarchists.

Suitors for Other Girl.

If all Anna Bertha Grunspan wants is a husband she may have one quickly. Since the start two weeks ago of the trial of her suit against William English Walling for $100,000, because that individual had not married her, she has been deluged with offers from men proposing marriage.

The suitors are not all New Yorkers. Apparently Cupid dropped into Justice Gaynor's quarters of the Supreme Court, viewed the Parisienne upon the witness stand, listened to her story and then shot his arrows far and wide.

A reporter found Miss Grunspan in her home, No. 245 East Thirtieth street, lying upon a couch and reading the morning journal.

"Don't you intend to respond in any way to these appeals?" asked the reporter.

"I respond to these strange persons?" she cried. "Never! I'd die of such a thing, Mr.—I am a lady. These men would have to face the authorities proper before I could begin to consider them."

"They came to her even as she murmured:

"I have loved once. That is all my heart is capable of. I shall lead a solitary life from now on—a little reading, a little playing, a little singing, a little studying.

"How many men have written to you?" was asked. She went to another room, returned with an armful of letters and dropped them in the reporter's lap.

"See for yourself," said she. "As for me, they are hateful."

She's a Turtle Dove to One.

A San Francisco wooer came to bat with a letter in which he begged his "little fluffy turtle dove" to spend the remainder of her days by his side at the rim of the Golden Gate. New Orleans, Ill., and Walla Walla, Wash., were represented. One person broke into poetry. Puritan boulevardiers indited messages of love in French. Here is one letter:

"My Dear Miss Grunspan—I have been an interested spectator of your trial, and although my sympathies are with Mr. Walling I greatly admire you and wish that I could know you. Here are some verses I have composed:

"O fair, that is I err then Phryne's!
O lips that are sweeter than wine!
O brow on which never a line is!
O eyes that on jasmines shine!
Could I know you, my own, could I hold you,
The nearest and dearest of all,
The other loves others have told you
Would fade and grow pale and would pall."

"I should like to meet you, for I believe you would enjoy the evening with me. Respectfully, WILLIAM F. ULMER."

A Chicagoan wrote:

"Dear Madame—Indeed it is a terrible thing to be married people to whom unfortunately. I have experienced it all, sympathize with you deeply. I am intense natured for a man. Every woman I ever loved has been a trifler. I would indeed like to meet a woman who could love intensely and who could look upon me as a god, as I have looked upon some women as goddesses. One is very happy when worshipping at the shrine of a god or goddess in human form. The breaking of the spell wrecks one's confidence in all human nature. But I assure you it is folly to permit grief over it, for there are others' we find along life's pathway. I should be greatly pleased to hear from you. Ardently,

"WILSON ARMOUR JENNINGS."

And a Plumber Is Ready.

Another would-be husband sent this:

"Dear Madame—Having seen your lovely picture in the papers, dear Miss Grunspan, and having read all about how you were wronged, I want to marry you. Oh, I love you so much, and I will never love anyone else. I am a respectable plumber with a good business, although it isn't very big yet. Oh, Anna Grunspan, I have been lovesick since my mother died. I can't see your picture, and I can't sleep for thinking of you. Please let me come and call on you, and please, oh, please, let me marry you, for I love you so much. Always I think of how I love you and won't you marry me? Yours forever,

"HOWARD BANCOCK BINCH.

"P. S.—I don't believe any of the lies told about you."

MISS BESSIE M'COY WHO MAY BE SECOND MRS. R. H. DAVIS

DAVIS VISITS BESSIE M'COY

PITTSBURG, March 6.—Friends of Richard Harding Davis, the novelist, point to the fact that he has just terminated a visit to this city as further evidence that he will wed Bessie McCoy, the actress. Miss McCoy is playing here in "The Echo."

Mr. Davis stopped at the Fort Pitt Hotel, where Miss McCoy was also a guest. It is believed that the wedding will take place as soon as the present Mrs. Davis obtains the divorce that she is suing for.

Mr. Davis is reported to be desperately in love with the little actress and her every whim is said to be a law with him.

Pittsburg remembers the time when Davis sent a messenger boy all the way from London, England, with a token of love to the present Mrs. Davis, who then lived in Chicago, and whom he was courting ardently.

Davis is well known in Pittsburg and vicinity, as his mother, Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis, was raised at Washington, Pa., near here. The transfer of the novelist's affections from his wife to Miss McCoy has caused great surprise. Local people who have met Dr. Davis on the Massachusetts coast, where they spent their summers, and who have visited them in New York, and have seen them at the Davis patrician home in Philadelphia, say the change in love must be very much in love with the present Mrs. Davis.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER'S LINGERIE FOR SALE

NEW YORK, March 6.—Leslie Carter's lingerie, including a large array of bewilderment garments, may be sold to satisfy her debts, and the courts will not restrain advertisements using her name, which give the articles added value as souvenirs. Supreme Court Justice Gerard denied Mrs. Carter an injunction against the sale and advertisements. The lingerie will be sold to satisfy an unpaid board bill of $1,146, which Mrs. Carter ran up at the Stratford house.

CLAN-NA-GAELS PAY TRIBUTE TO EMMET

The 108th anniversary of the birth of the martyr and patriot, Robert Emmet, was observed at the Tremont Theatre, last night, under the auspices of the Clan-na-Gael Association. The speakers were John T. Keating of Chicago, John Devoy, editor of the Gaelic American, and others. They were escorted from the Essex House to the theatre by five companies of the Irish Volunteers.

GOLD DUST will take the grime and smut, grease and dirt from your pots and pans in a twinkling, leaving the cleaning as clean as when new GOLD DUST is so far ahead of soap for cleaning pots and pans, that the woman who does not use it is really doing about twice as much work as necessary. The soap merely cleans off the surface, and does not dig deep after the germs of decay which accumulate on pots, pans and kettles which are in constant use.

GOLD DUST does more than clean—it goes to the very heart of things, kills every germ and sterilizes your cooking utensils. It makes them sanitary, clean and safe.

GOLD DUST does the work in just half the time that it can be done with soap or any other cleanser.

GOLD DUST is a vegetable oil soap in powdered form, which starts to work the moment it strikes the water; it cleans quickly, easily and thoroughly.

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kenzene with Gold Dust. Gold Dust has all desirable cleansing qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form.

PAGE PANTS TO FIND LOST PANTS

Where are Mr. Page's pants?

Brookline has a mystery in its midst. George F. Page's pants have vanished, leaving absolutely no trace. In the homes of millionaires, and in the village, the query is the same. The sad fact remains that Page is pantless.

Both the Brookline Bureau of Criminal Investigation and the owner of the pants say there is absolutely no reason why Mr. Page's pants should have disappeared. Mr. Page says the pants had a good home, were always treated kindly and appeared to be fully satisfied with their lot. Mr. Page believes the pants were lured away.

Had Pressing Engagement.

The complete story of the disappearance of the pants is told by a man in Mr. Page's confidence as follows:

On last Friday evening, directly after dinner, Mr. Page looked over his wardrobe and discovered a pair of shoes that needed repairing. He also decided that his dark suit and the fine, nearly new worsted pants which went with it could stand pressing. It was snowing.

Mr. Page put on his overcoat, and took his shoes in his right hand—the shoes which were repairing—and over his left arm he hung his dark coat and the striped worsted pants.

Then he set forth through the snow from his home at No. 15 Linden street, walking directly to the corner of Harvard and Linden streets, Harvard street. He turned to the right and proceeded to the shop of the cobbler in Harvard street. Arrived there, he gave the cobbler the required directions for the proper repair of his shoes.

No Pants There.

On emerging from the cobbler's, he turned to his left and walked down Harvard street toward Brookline Village, intending to leave the dark coat and the striped pants at the tailor's. But just as he was about to step into the tailoring establishment, he noticed a lightness about the bundle over his arm which aroused his suspicions. Looking down, his suspicions were confirmed.

The pants were gone.

Immediately Mr. Page retraced his steps to the shop, looking for the pants; but the snow held no traces of the pants.

He reentered the cobbler's shop and asked for the pants. The cobbler knew of no pants except those he was working on.

Mr. Page retraced his steps back to his own portals, but still no trace of the pants.

Mr. Page advertised the loss of his pants in the Boston papers and also tacked descriptive cards on various telegraph and telephone poles in the vicinity of his home, No. 15 Linden street. Any person meeting the pants is requested to tell them of the sorrow their disappearance has caused Mr. Page and to urge them kindly but firmly to return home.

WOMAN ENNOBLED BY POPE PIUS IS DEAD

BALTIMORE, March 6.—Mrs. Mary Isabella Jenkins, wife of Michael Jenkins, a prominent capitalist and philanthropist of this city, is dead. The title of Duchess of Llewellyn was conferred on Mrs. Jenkins by Pope Pius X. in recognition of her benefactions to the Catholic church.

Rheumatism Yields to the Great Kidney Remedy

I have been troubled with rheumatism for the last five years. Suffered with much pain in the limbs, back and feet and my joints have been badly swollen. Also suffered from constipation. Besides having a regular physician, I had tried every remedy I could hear of, but got no benefit until I accidentally came across a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I began taking it, never thinking it would help me, but must acknowledge it has done wonders for me. Have taken more than a dozen bottles and feel that it has been a God-send to me. I am recommending it to all my friends.

Yours very truly,
IRA ALDRICH,
Howard Street, Holyoke, Mass.

Personally appeared Ira Aldrich and made oath that the statement subscribed by him is true, before me.
D. J. HARTNETT,
Justice of the Peace.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You

WOMEN LAUGH AT $20 BABY VALUE

Without stopping to inquire whether Professor Thomas Carver, head of the department of economics at Harvard, is a bachelor, several of Boston's best known women take issue with his reputed utterance that the economic value of a baby is less than $20.

"If a baby has an economic value of only $20," said Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, "then aged people would not have any higher economic worth. What was Mrs. Julia Ward Howe worth at ninety? She wrote poems and prose occasionally, but what she did in a material way was comparatively insignificant. Does not the saliency of the economic value test become apparent?

Smile at Professor.

"Was Mrs. Howe's value to society only $20 with the influence that she exerted upon the thought of the nation? Then again, there is in every baby a potential value apart from its value in infancy. What was the worth of Abraham Lincoln at the age of one year? You see the economic value of a baby is an idle issue."

Mrs. Richard Cabot smiled when asked to comment on Professor Carver's statement. She declared she could not enter into a discussion on the economic phases of the question, but readily expressed her opinion of the value of Professor Carver's speculation.

"To determine the economic value of a baby and fix it at $20 seems to me to be a test that falls far short of showing a baby's actual worth to society. It is a wasteful speculation. Just as idle would be the speculation how many hairs were on the head of the average man."

Baby a King.

Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, one of the trustees of the Children's Institute, did not mince words in criticising Professor Carver's statement.

"To appraise a baby at $20," she said, "is in my opinion impairing rare wealth from a far country at a false price. Even in the house of the poor a baby is born a king—for a year. Taken as an economic proposition, an investment of $20 means but $1 a year in annual interest, and few economists would deny that the ethical value of a baby-life is worth more than that to the State, if only as an incentive to parents as a means of teaching family love.

"Quite aside from potential value, a wage-earner, worn out by toil, realizes that children are more valuable than invested capital in increasing domestic happiness when the work-day is over."

MRS. COPP, CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY, WHO SAYS, 'JUST HUSTLE'

MEREDITH, N. H., March 6.—"Hustle, not inspiration, is the secret of success," says Mrs. Dena Woodward Copp, wholesale baker, restaurant-keeper, basketball captain and moving picture manager. "Just hustle and win," she counsels.

Mrs. Copp is a captain of industry worthy of a metropolis. Her bakeries, built up from a small establishment, send out from 1,500 to 2,000 loaves of bread daily in Winter. In the busy Summer season, when vacationists are crowding every hotel and boarding house around the lake and mountain district, she sends out 3,000 loaves daily.

Meredith is now known as the "town of bakeries." Mrs. Copp attends to the business personally. In addition, she finds time to be captain and fight forward of the girls' "Dauntless" basketball team, which is a snappy organization to run a restaurant and to invest in moving picture enterprises. At the Meredith moving picture houses she can frequently be seen in the manager's office, keeping an eye on the audience and the till.

She is a graduate of Plymouth Normal school and, before she went into baking, taught in several Northern New Hampshire towns. She has a beautiful home here and entertains lavishly.

"Though I am in business," says Mrs. Copp, "I recognize that woman's real place is in her home. Perhaps the happiest woman of us all is the one with simple home duties and without great ambition."

CAT CAUSE OF BURGLAR SCARE

Of course, people can't be thinking of that Wellesley College fuss all the time.

When a burglar alarm at police headquarters rang at 3:30 a. m. to-day and a feminine voice said:

"Help—police—burglars! This is Mrs Lewis at No. 46 Westland avenue—there's a burglar in the cellar—I can hear him!"

Well, headquarters thought it was our clare. They relayed the alarm to the Back Bay police station. Three cops went around to Westland avenue in jig time.

At No. 46 they drew their revolvers and went down in the cellar in single file and great expectation.

They found one large Angora cat, which blinked at them suspiciously. The cops gingerly swung their guns and reported back to Mrs. Lewis: "Your burglar ma'am, is a cat. Have no fear."

Then the cops returned to the Back Bay police station. At the station they said to the desk man: "The Wellesley cat snatcher is missing the chance of his life up in Westland avenue."

EX-SENATOR DEFENDS COLORED TEACHER

WORCESTER, March 6.—Alfred S. Roe, ex-Senator and ex-Commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R., gives a verbal lashing to the residents of Pelham street section because they object to the occupation of No. 4 Pelham street by Miss Mary Wilson, a colored school teacher. In an open letter Mr. Roe says in part: "Her purchase, we are told, is a teacher at the public schools. She was good enough to enlist the schools, to sit by the side of other pupils, lighter in color than herself, and to go through the normal school with the daughters of our citizens, and then, after being duly examined she became a teacher in the public schools. No one has ever heard a word of complaint against her there; she has saved her wages, in spite of the often urged improper advice of her people, and has bought a home."

Five Minutes Sometimes Makes A Big Difference

If You Are Suffering the Tortures of Indigestion and Have to Wait Until Someone Runs to the Drug Store for a Box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Free Trial Package.

The instant relief afforded poor overburdened stomachs by the use of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet should be a reason for constantly keeping a box on hand—at home and at the office as well.

The Stomach Welcomes Quick Relief.

A Stuart's Tablet not only aids digestion but it actually does the digesting itself. In other words, it furnishes exactly the same elements for the digestion of food as the natural juices of the stomach. The stomach, therefore, is not called upon to do any of the work except to churn the juices furnished by the tablet and then pass the digested food along to the intestines, where it will be still further digested and the strength taken up by the blood to be carried to the muscles and nerves of the body.

So by taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after a meal you give the stomach the rest it needs in which to mend itself and grow well again. And you absolutely prevent the souring of any food, the formation of any poisonous gases, belching, foul breath or constipation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have done more for humanity and have caused more rejoicing than any other one agency that can be named.

Every druggist everywhere sells and personally recommends Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The price is 50 cents per box. If you first wish to try them a sample package will be sent you free if you write F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

To Every Person who has played the races, bought mining stocks or gambled :: :: ::

Greeting! You have played the most interesting game in the world—and you have lost.

And you will play it again and you'll lose again.

The wisest man who plays the races, or speculates, hasn't a chance.

We are all "suckers" together.

How do I know? Because I have played both ends—and lost.

I am an expert on horse-racing.

I made $7.30 grow into $1,500,000.00 in less than two years, giving tips on the races.

And I lost it all betting on my own tips.

I am an expert on mining stocks.

I have induced the public to part with $200,000,000.00 for Nevada securities.

I engineered the Goldfield boom.

I was on "the inside." I got in on all the good things.

I haven't got a cent to-day.

I have gambled since I was a kid.

I have been in all the gambling hells that count for anything.

I have as good luck as the next man and a lot more experience.

I have won all kinds of money. But I have lost every cent.

All I have to show for my years' work is a large fund of experience, some odd recollections, and this firm conviction:

The Public hasn't got a chance.

I have no intention of telling you a hard-luck story, but I do want to tell you how the game is worked.

It's not all bad. It's not all good.

It's merely catering to the American people's insatiable desire to gamble.

I want to tell you

How your money goes.
Who gets it
What they do with it
What chance you have of winning it back.

I want you to know the game as I know it, see it as I have seen it —from the inside.

This is not a moral exposé. It's a life story. It's just what the title says:

"My Adventures with Your Money."

It's a great yarn—a real adventure story. And it's true.

George Graham Rice.

"My Adventures with Your Money" begins in the April number of Adventure. The first chapters lay bare the inside workings of race-tipping bureaus, and especially the career of Maxim E. Gay, which Mr. Rice owned and operated. It's a great story. Ask your newsdealer to-day for April

EVACUATION DAY PARADE ROUTE

Dr. William H. Ruddick, chief marshal of the Evacuation Day parade, has selected Commander D. Joseph O'Leary of Roger Wolcott Camp, Spanish War Veterans, as his chief of staff, and subject to change has decided on the procession route in South Boston to be as follows:

Forming in Andrews square and vicinity, the parade will start promptly at 2:30 p. m. on Evacuation Day and proceed along Dorchester street, East Broadway, G street, Thomas park, G street, East Sixth, B street, East Fourth street, I street, East Eighth street, K street, East Fourth street to Farragut road at the extreme Point end of the district, then from that point over the entire length of East Broadway and West Broadway to Dorchester avenue, where it will be dismissed, the marching organizations having Dorchester avenue to the east and west and Broadway extension to the north by which to reach their quarters.

One reviewing stand will be at West Broadway and C street and occupied by Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman Curley and other distinguished guests. Another stand at A street and Broadway will be occupied by Chief Marshal Ruddick and his staff.

There will be two companies of marines from the navy yard, troops from barbor forts, the coast artillery, the naval brigade, the signal corps, a battalion from the Fifth and Ninth regiments and a battalion of high school cadets, besides many other organizations in the parade.

The committee in charge of the celebration has arranged for a brilliant illumination of the Dorchester Heights monument on the evening of the 17th in honor of the patriotic exercises in the South Boston [illegible] ceremony.

DIRECT VOTE UP IN FIVE STATES

Answering the popular demand for a law, making possible the election of United States Senators by the people, the Legislatures of five New England States will consider this week the AMERICAN'S uniform resolution, which calls for a constitutional convention. The States are: Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Advocates of the reform are confident that the promptness with which this conservative section of the Union has rallied to the support of the movement will make it imperative on Congress to act without further delay. The South, West and middle sections of the country are unanimous in a similar demand.

In Connecticut the AMERICAN'S resolution, which has been sent to each of the forty-six States because of a lack of uniformity in previous measures of like character, will have a hearing before the Federal Relations Committee. The people of the State are clamoring for its adoption.

Hearing Next Friday.

In this State the resolution is to have a hearing on next Friday. Five measures are now before the Legislature providing for the popular election of United States Senators. Two ask for the convention, but specify no time limit. The Committee on Federal Relations will report a new draft, which will ask Congress to act without delay.

In Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island amendments will be offered during the week to resolutions now pending calling upon Congress for the desired convention, the duty of which will be to propose the measure to be submitted to the several States for ratification.

To-morrow will be of great interest to the voters of Connecticut, as the AMERICAN'S resolution is to have a hearing by the Committee on Federal Relations. The measure was introduced last week by State Senator Bailey and has strong support.

Senator Spellacy's resolution, which is similar in intent, embodying Governor Baldwin's ideas as to how to obtain the present unsatisfactory method of choosing Representatives for the upper House of Congress will also go before the Legislature.

Income Amendment.

Other important events expected at Hartford Tuesday include the presentation in the House of the resolution placing Connecticut in line for the ratification of the income amendment to the constitution and the opening and first ballot, Governor Baldwin's Democratic appointees.

When the Republican majority selected the personnel of the Committee on Federal Relations it appears to have been forgotten that these two important measures would come before that committee. The committee as now constituted has seven Democrats and four Republicans. Senator Lounsbury and Representative Clarke of Portland, Penn of Weathersfield and Burnham of Hebron, are Republicans, but the chairman of the committee, Senator Gary Podboy of Bridgeport, and Representative Meyer of Marlboro, Pope of Oxford, Dearing of Norwich, Widman of Brookfield, Lashern of Tolland and Parmelee of Saybrook, are Democrats.

The committee last Wednesday voted to report favorably Tuesday on the income tax measure, and all the Democrats and two of the Republicans have declared that no matter what the outcome of the hearing they are unchangeably in favor of the direct vote of the people on United States Senators and will so report to the Legislature.

TAKES UP CASE OF ASSESSORS

Chairman John A. Sullivan of the Finance Commission reached his office as director of the investigating body to-day after a short vacation, and at once examined the information which the commission has secured during his absence relative to the appointment of first assistant assessors. The commission will give a public hearing upon this matter and the chairman will announce the date.

One of the most important witnesses at this hearing is expected to be Charles J. Dowd, one of the first assistant assessors who failed of reappointment. Dowd was examined by Michael J. Sugrue and John C. L. Bowling, counsel for the commission, last week, and is reported to have some interesting facts.

One of the facts which the public hearing is expected to disclose is that Dowd was "tipped off" that he was not likely to be reappointed and was advised to get his "pull" to work. He attributes his failure to be reappointed to the fact that his "pull" was not strong enough. He had been a first assistant assessor since 1907. He is a member of the firm of Dowd Brothers, housebuyers.

The commission proposes to investigate the facts leading up to the appointment of John J. Butler of Ward 18 and Jeremiah J. Flood of Ward 17. Butler was one of the drafted candidates for the City Council at the last election and is a follower of Leader Timilty. Flood is a brother-in-law of Congressman Curley and was a legislative agent for a corporation last year. The commission is also probing the appointment of A. S. Parker Weeks, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the City Council last year. The result of the public hearing is expected to have an important bearing upon the appointment of second assistant assessors which have yet to be made.

OPERATE AGAIN ON J. M. CURLEY

Congressman James M. Curley, who has been ill for nearly two months, was operated upon for the second time at the City Hospital yesterday. The operation is said to have been successful, and hope is held out that he will be able to assume his duties at Washington when Congress meets for the extra session on April 4.

Mr. Curley was sent to the hospital to be treated for an abscess seven weeks ago. He was operated upon and subsequently showed much improvement that he was able to return to his home. After three weeks, however, the same trouble returned.

DANIEL J. KANE, EXALTED RULER OF BOSTON ELKS

KANE HEAD OF BOSTON ELKS

Daniel J. Kane, a young Boston lawyer, received many congratulations to-day upon being elected exalted ruler of the Boston Lodge of Elks, No. 10. The election took place yesterday afternoon and last night at the lodge's home, No. 10 Somerset street.

The election was a spirited one and brought out more than 1,000 members of the lodge. The new head of the lodge has been in secretary for five years and has a wide acquaintanceship throughout Elkdom.

Others elected were: Charles A. Kelley, secretary; George H. Johnson, trustee; esteemed loyal knight, Thomas C. Dwane; esteemed leading knight, Matthew T. Birmingham; treasurer, Frederick J. Brandstrier, Oscar Shaffer, representative to the Grand Lodge; Thomas H. Duffy, alternate representative, James L. Johnston.

ASK HEARING ON ROURKE ORDER

Councilor John J. Attridge at the request of numerous down town business owners to-day introduced an order at the meeting of the City Council calling for a public hearing on the question as to whether the city shall suspend the collection of waste material and garbage in the business district.

Commissioner Rourke of the Public Works Department has issued an order that after March 15 the department will not remove boxes, paper, straw, excelsior or other packing material and store it with any accumulation from business operations.

There is vigorous opposition to the promulgation of this order on the part of many business houses and at their request Councilor Attridge has urged the commissioner to suspend the enforcement of the order until the City Council has had an opportunity to consider the matter and given the remonstrants to the plan an opportunity to be heard.

There is no statute or ordinance which compels the city to make such collections and the work has been up to the present a gratuitous service by the city. There will be about 1,000 teams engaged in the work and Commissioner Rourke plans to transfer them one to substations districts where complaints over the subsequent collection of garbage and ashes may seem common.

Winter winds bring them out in all their hideousness, and Kintho is ready for you at Houghton & Dutton's and Riker-Jaynes, or wherever toilet articles are sold. MEETING HOUSE HILL EXPRESS

Vice-President C. S. Sargeant of the Elevated rond to-day notified Chief Timothy F. Mooney of the City Hall Bureau of Information that within a few days the company would establish an express line of cars between the Dudley street terminal and Upham's Corner for the convenience of Meeting House Hill commuters.

The suggestion by Chief Mooney that this service be established, was made at the request of the Meeting House Hill Improvement Association, which organization has been considering the question of relieving congestion on the Meeting House Hill line.

The new service will be a distinct innovation, and if it operates successfully it is probable that it will be introduced on other lines of the company. It is the intention of the company to clear the doors of the cars when leaving the Dudley Street Terminal, and they will not be opened until Upham's Corner is reached. By this method it is expected that passengers living between the terminal and Upham's Corner will take cars other than the Meeting House Hill lines, thus relieving the overcrowding of the trolleys which has been common. The express service will be furnished during the rush hours of the morning and evening.

The company has also considered the request of Mr. Mooney that increased service be furnished on the Ashmont and Milton cars, and Vice-President Sargeant reported that additional cars will be operated on this line.

Another improvement in the service will be the operation of a late car on the Columbia Road-Mattapan line.

PRIEST STOPS A FIRE PANIC

LAWRENCE, March 6.—Panic in a congregation to-day was averted only through the courage of Father Plasmnas, who ran into an excited throng of his people and quelled their fears just as they were about to rush pellmell from the church.

The 6 o'clock mass at the French Catholic Church at Haverhill and Franklin streets was nearing the close when the lace surplice of an alter boy brushed against a candelabrum in the sacristy. The candlestick with its lighted candles was overturned.

In an instant lace curtains were set on fire and the flame mounted high in the sacristy.

The flames alarmed the congregation, and many began to hurry out. Other members of the congregation joined the flight and a stampede, when the Rev. Fr. Raymond Plasmnan, rector of the church, was at the altar. He was astonished to see the greater part of his congregation preparing to take rapid flight and then he saw the fire. At the same moment he comprehended the fact that the flames had nothing but draperies upon which to feed and that there was no danger.

Raising his arms and extending them he cried out: "Stop! There is no danger! Be seated!"

PEORIA JOBBERS' KINDLY INTEREST

Fischer Bros. Dry Goods Company is the name of a large jobbing and publishing house in Peoria, Illinois. We have had several letters from them within the past few days, and in the course of one of them a friend Carjenty prompted us to write and ask for some particulars concerning their business. They reply as follows:

"A friend of ours, a Mr. Schlitzky, who was recently discharged from the hospital in New York, was so sick with Bright's Disease that he was obliged to give up his traveling position. His weight was reduced from a hundred and eighty-five to a hundred and twenty-five pounds. He was in a critical condition, and did not expect to live. He was induced by a friend to send for a bottle of the Renal Compound and commenced to use it. We were surprised to meet him a year later looking like a giant and weighing 210 pounds. He was himself still, had regained his lost weight and was enjoying the very best of health. We were personally acquainted with Mr. Schlitzky's case before he used Fulton's Renal Compound and know that he was given up to die by doctors at Omaha and was on his way to Seattle to stand by some of his friends.

Meanwhile there are patients dying in the hospitals who are given no chance to save their lives. Physicians do not seem to change their treatment—simply add Fulton's Renal Compound to the heart treatment they are already giving. Or, if they prefer, they can give it alone, as per direction. There is every hope, but none without it.

Whether he knows it or not, every one who has had kidney trouble over six months is in danger and ground.

DRUGGIST MISSING, HAD $350 WITH HIM

Albert H. Grimshaw, proprietor of a drug store at No. 288 Highland avenue, Somerville, residing at No. 99 Cedar street, has been missing from his home and place of business since Thursday morning, at 10:30, and although every hospital and institution around Boston has been interrogated no trace of him has been discovered.

Grimshaw left his store on Thursday morning, carrying with him a leather bag, similar to that carried by physicians, and contained no more or less than $350. It is in the vicinity of $350. His intention was to keep two appointments in Boston, but he did not appear at either place.

Is the Tuberculosis Crusade Losing Ground?

Despite all the efforts being made by advocates of fresh air and egg-and-milk treatments, the number of new cases has not been noticeably decreased.

Write to us and ask to be referred to Clergymen, Priests, men and women who took Eckman's Alterative and are perfectly well and strong without a trace of tuberculosis—pronounced so by physicians. Some of them took the Alterative 20 years ago when doctors said they would not live 10 weeks.

Could anything be fairer to yourself and those who love you and would do anything to restore you to health? If you are skeptical—investigate us, our medicine, our advertised statements. Write to those who have sent in affidavits and testimonials telling how Eckman's Alterative cured them. Here is one:

1223 Girard Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
Gentlemen:—I feel it my duty to tell what Eckman's Alterative has done for me. I had an attack of Grippe, followed by Pneumonia, and after the Pneumonia I had a bad cough, night sweats, loss of appetite, and terrible weakness. After taking it a few days hemorrhages at one time, three in forty minutes—the doctor said I could not live. I was so distressed I could keep nothing down. Three doctors had given me up. I continued to take Eckman's Alterative and in a few days the hemorrhages were controlled. After taking it a month I had so much strength that I went to work. My improvement was marked from the first. I gained strength, weight and appetite. I never had another hemorrhage and my cough gradually lessened until entirely gone. I am perfectly well. Everything I say here can be verified by my friend and friend, Mr. [illegible]
Yours truly,
(Signed) [illegible]

NEW RECORD IN TIRE EXHIBITS

The equipment at the different auto shows has always been and always will be a most interesting question. In speaking of the same to-day James A. Braden of the Diamond Tire Company, said:

"Tire statistics of the automobile show disclose twenty makers of tires represented in the equipment of machines exhibited. This is three more tire builders than have had any representation in any other of the motor exhibitions of the year.

"Diamond tires, with a total of ninety-three cars shown on them, carry off first honors in Boston, as they did last year. Figures compiled by Diamond representatives show a total of 2,607 cars exhibited in fourteen principal automobile exhibitions of 1911—ten per cent more cars than in any former year, with an aggregate of twenty-two tire builders represented in the total equipment.

"With 682 cars shown on its product the Diamond Company claims a large lead in the season's exhibitions."

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

MEETINGS HELD IN 200 TOWNS

More than 200 of the 321 towns in Massachusetts are holding their town meetings. The license question holds the centre of interest in about forty of the towns, where the vote is always close.

Political circles in Colossal have been stirred by a "night before" sensation in the form of a summons to court on the charge of criminal libel issued against one of the selectmen and the attachment placed on an entire edition of the town paper containing the alleged libel. It is claimed that action is brought by the leading supporter of one of the new candidates for the board of selectmen.

In Needham dissatisfaction has been expressed with the administration of school affairs and interest will centre about the election of school committeemen.

Seven candidates for the three positions of selectmen in Dedham has brought about metropolitan methods of campaigning in that town, and the postoffice has been deluged with an avalanche of circulars and postcards extolling the virtues of various candidates.

Wakefield likewise promises an interesting contest with ten men out for the five positions on the board of selectmen, and with a total registration of over 7,000 a record vote is expected.

FILL CATHEDRAL TO OPEN MISSION

The annual mission in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross has opened more than 6,000 persons attending the first two sermons. The mission this year is being conducted by four Passionate Fathers, Fr. Alexis, C. P., the Brighton Monastery; Fr. Hubert, C. P., and Fr. Walter, C. P., from the Monastery at Pittsburg, and Fr. Leonard, C. P., of St. Ann's monastery at Scranton, Pa.

TENANTS NEAR DEATH IN FIRE

Families living in the building at No. 80 Brighton street, West End, had a narrow escape from being suffocated when smoke from a fire on the ground floor filled the hallways and penetrated into the sleeping rooms in the upper stories. The tenants who were aroused by the cries of people on the street were driven to the fire escapes.

TAFT AID FOR YOUNG HUBBARD

Mrs. Celia B. Hubbard of No. 10 Chester place, South End, has received from the War Department, Washington, a letter signed by Adjutant-General McCline, in which Mrs. Hubbard is informed that the Secretary of War was directed by President Taft to take one year from the sentence of two and one-half years given her son, Edwin H. Hubbard, now confined in the military prison at Fort Warren, for desertion from the army.

ENGAGEMENT OF BAKLANOFF ENDS

George Baklanoff, the Russian baritone of the Boston Opera Company, makes his last American appearance for this season as Nilakantha in Delibes's opera "Lakme," at the Boston Opera House to-night.

M. Baklanoff sails next Saturday to fulfil his European engagements which call for his appearance in Paris, Berlin and Vienna.

With Any Type Open Body and Completely Equipped
(Actually Weighs, Ready for the Road, 3700 Lbs)

An exact reproduction of the same model being manufactured at the Italian factory in Turin, Italy, with all parts are interchangeable, a decided advantage for Americans who tour Europe. Every leading American Car in one or more essential features is copied from designs created by FIAT ingenieurs. FIAT cars have always been the centre of interest for automobile ingenieurs and designers at the great shows abroad as well as in this country. FIAT ingenieurs have designed more original features in motor cars than the designers of all other European and American manufacturers. Fiat cars as produced at Turin and Poughkeepsie are far in advance of all European and American cars. Their original and exclusive features make them more reliable, dependable, luxurious and economical than all other passenger motor vehicles.

This MASTER CAR continues to hold its premier position in Europe as well as America. The monobloc casting, which includes and conceals all four cylinders as well as the inlet and exhaust manifolds, has great advantages as regards simplicity, reliability and efficiency over the old-fashioned types in which cylinders are cast singly or in pairs. The long stroke design gives this motor far more effective horsepower than other motors of similar diameter. When running no moving parts are visible, and therefore are absolutely protected from dust, dirt and grit. The two-piece Pressed Steel Rear Axle and Driving Shaft Housing is at once the strongest and lightest that has ever been designed. It is more rigid and infinitely more simple than those requiring strut and torsion rods. The three-quarter elliptic rear springs, for which the FIAT holds basic patents, make this car better suspended and easier riding than any other type. It is noteworthy that the excellence of this feature has caused it to be very generally copied by many high-priced cars.

Our statements are broad, but a careful investigation and a demonstration of this car is all we ask

AUTO SHOW MAGNET FOR GREAT THRONG

By J. C. KERRIGAN.

The cursory view of the exhibits obtained by the thousands upon thousands who visited the motor vehicles building and Horticultural Hall on Saturday evening by no means gave one an adequate idea of the real values that are to be found there. It did, however, impress one with the great strength and stability of the motor vehicle industry, and made more manifest than ever that it is one of the greatest, if not the greatest industry, that has found a hold in the United States. In the exhibit is represented almost every style in the Union, and every State contributes in some manner or other to the magnitude of the industry, and gains for its residents more or less employment, not that is an industrial proposition, as deep as a motor writer.

The show brought out such a gathering as has never been seen at the opening of any kindred exhibit held in this city. It was rather an exceptional crowd for the first night, and, as Manager Campbell said yesterday, while it was a record-breaker in the way of attendance, it was likewise a record-breaker in the fact that more actual business was transacted by more than one exhibitor. As for instance, the first sale of the show is claimed by no less than half a dozen men, equally divided between the pleasure and the commercial vehicle departments.

Saturday, the opening day, always a hard time for exhibitors and management alike, kept the hustle and excitement on the jump when the closing bell sounded the expiration of the first night. Yesterday the men interested in the exhibit from a business viewpoint, managed to get into the show and look over the various models far away from the maddening crowd. They had an opportunity to see the motors devoid of exterior and body decorations and they took full measure of their opportunity.

The great majority wandered through the buildings yesterday and in groups discussed this, that or the other model, noted the little matters of detail about which they did and lacking on the other chassis, talked over the various fine points, which are considered good selling points, and in general dissected each exhibit, without the slightest of feeling, just swapping ideas that was all, and yet the knowledge which is of good value to the progressive businessman. And motor dealers are certainly progressive. As a rule they admit that they do not know it all and are willing to take advantage of the other fellow's knowledge. And such was the case yesterday.

Buyers Show Knowledge.

The show opened right on time this morning, and within a very few minutes everything was in fine running order. What was more to the point there was interested visitors. Visitors who came not so much to be seen, as to see and decided for themselves what in their opinion was the best car to purchase, not alone for pleasure but likewise for business purposes.

And that brings to mind the fact that at no previous show has the visitor been so wise to ignition, transmission and other things about the car as they are at this one. The question asked the various salesmen are right to the point, free from ignorance and display an exceptional knowledge of motors. No longer is the purchase of a car made by the outward appearance of the body. The prospective purchaser has to be shown. The hood is removed and the engine exposed to view so that the salesman can display to the purchaser the parts under discussion or explanation.

One feature of to-day's exhibit, which was lacking in the Saturday night show, is that of the demonstrative cars, which lined up alongside the curb in front of both Mechanics Building and Horticultural Hall. At these two places are veritable exhibits in themselves, the cars there being exact counterparts of those displayed within the halls. There is only difference in the latter are luminous, while the former are equipped with the life-giving fluid, ready to step on it and show to prospects its excellency. The demonstration feature of a show is the one thing that the dealers really dread, but it has to be done. These demonstrations virtually deplete the force of the different companies, and in no small measure prevents getting the very best there is to be secured from the show.

Show week is really the worst time in the whole year that a man can have a demonstration. Then the demonstration trips must necessarily be short, for there are always more writers than participants, and the dealer is often at his wit's ends as to just how to get the best results from such work.

The show has taken hold with a great rush and vim. It is a show that must be seen to be appreciated. And one that will require more than one visit in order to thoroughly appreciate. In fact a person cannot possibly cover every department in one day. Take Mechanics Hall, for instance, there is the basement, main floors and balconies, each and every one of them containing displays that are really worth the inspecting.

The basement is really as interesting to the visitor as is the main floor, and in many ways it is more so to some. Here are to be found not only the finest of pleasure cars, but likewise the light delivery wagons and the great ponderous trucks whose weight and bulk virtually precludes their being shown on the main floor. Then on the main floor one finds pleasure vehicles of every description, and in the balconies are a veritable army of accessories.

A few blocks up the street from Mechanics Building in Horticultural Hall is to be found another exhibit, fully as important, and fully as interesting as is the one at Mechanics Building. While nominally this the overflow exhibit, it must not for a single moment be imagined that it is not an important one. It is. It is fully as big in quality as is the one in Mechanics Building. Its character is fully as varied as is the Mechanics Building exhibit, and to miss this is to see a play without all of the main and important performers and features. The machines here representing the characters of a play are as distinct as are the differences in those in Mechanics Building, and they should not be slighted in the least degree.

NOTES OF THE SHOW

Joseph Evergree Ryan, the bright particular star in the western skies, arrived in town late Saturday night and proceeded to look things over. The show he unhesitatingly admitted was a wonder, its decorative effect the last word in decorations, and the crowd wonderful for a first night. Joe Ryan is one of the most famous of America's famous newspapermen, and what he doesn't know about the motor industry isn't worth knowing, so that his ideas regarding the Boston show certainly carry weight.

Another trophy of importance is the Vanderbilt Cup to be found at the Alco both together with the identical car that twice won that trophy, a feat that has been accomplished but once. Harry Grant, the modest Cambridge boy who twice proved his stern to the competitors in the Vanderbilt contest, was likewise holding a reception at the booth.

* * *

How Grant and Dawson enjoy these duty and nightly receptions is readily seen by the following incident. The two met each other early this morning. "Gee," says Grant, "I would rather drive five races than do this trick." "Me too," says Dawson, "let's go on the stage." "Not till I get from another Vanderbilt," said Grant, whereupon Dawson rejoined, "The next Vanderbilt is mine. I have already notched my name on the cup. You might as well send it over to Wing." "All before you trim me," laughingly said Grant, and the two went their various way to take up the pump handle action all the while wanted to grasp the hand of champions.

The Gliddon trophy," the silver cup that has time and again sent the automobile world around in a circle and has caused one drivers, newspapermen and others many to convince themselves that Lucy Hetherington through strenuous countries and wide all sorts of hardships as well as pleasures, is to be found at the Chalmers show. It is a fine example of the silversmiths art and looks, if once would not be a single moment think that it has stood more than one heart and it has been beaten back hard. But it has. There it stands in all its glory, in all its wonderous sanity, commanding attention from every, and causing the old timers to think of the trips through the mountains, across the West, and last, but not least, through the Souta. Where next will it take motor car is the question that men are asking but none can answer. Board of Control can tell, and that body is not ready to say the word.

* * *

C. C. Winningham, who writes all the pile dings about Howard E. Coffin and the Hudson car the latter builds, arrived in on yesterday afternoon, and immediately started in to look over the affairs of show.

* * *

Jo Jordan, who comes all the way from Oconto, Wisconsin, struck the town early this morning, coming over to Boston to tell about the Rambler and its merits.

* * *

She is a whole conch of bright lights at Motor show. You can shy an apple any section you may desire and you will only hit some one or two men who are less the country over.

* * *

Joe Green, who is one of the very few men in this country who has the distinguished honor of having driven in a Gordon Bennett contest, is at the show in his capity as Eastern salesmanager of the Gilmore Company. Associated with Mr. Green are A. W. Barber, E. E. Cole, A. Edwards and Thomas Kirker. The latter was Lorimer's mechanic at the Lowell meeting, while Eddie Cole is an old Wakefield boy.

* * *

Si Broadwell, once the famous exponent of Flint, then in here in the interests of the Hudson people, and he is accompanied by John McCullen and William Begg.

* * *

Walker of the Locomobile Company will see the Boston show this year for the first time in his history. He has been at show and could not postpone his trip over the sake of seeing Boston and its show.

* * *

The passenger motor coach line between Mechanics Building and Horticultural Hall is taking overtime, and Manager Campbell is seriously considering leasing several monopinnes.

* * *

Montgomery Hallowell of the United States Motor Co., who is here in the interests of that great organization, says the show is the one best bet.

* * *

L. H. Bradley, an old-time Boston boy, and now a pencil pusher on the Boston AMERICAN, is here in the interests of the M. F. Bradley being the right hand man of Jerry Knott, the publicity expert of the Detroit aggregation. Bradley is being visited by hundreds of his old-time friends, who are always glad to see a Boston boy make good.

* * *

Among the accessories exhibited at the show, the Gray & Davis Dynamo seems to attract the greatest attention. It will be remembered that this dynamo was first exhibited at Boston last year, and since that time it has become very popular, and is now part equipment on a very large number of cars. The Gray & Davis Dynamo is a distinctive advance in automobile construction. It not only lights full lamp equipment, but charges battery and provides current for a power-operated horn. It requires no attention after once being installed. It is driven by the motor, and offers every possible convenience.

"That business men everywhere are fully alive to the significance of the trail mark 'Made in New England'—which the leading manufacturers in the section long famous for the quality of its products are adopting—was evidenced by the interest expressed at all the Western shows in the Morgan trucks, both five-ton and three-ton capacity," said W. L. Russell, Boston agent for the Morgan. "And," he continued, "that the business men of our own section are just alive to the fact that New England workmanship means the highest of high class is shown by the way they have placed their orders with us for Morgan trucks.

"We anticipate that our entire allotment will be sold before the close of the Boston show."

CONFERENCE OF SALES FORCES

Armed with important information about motor car sales conditions in every nook and corner of the country, gathered in a 15,000-mile round-the-continent trip, George M. Berry, head of the Rambler sales forces, will arrive in Boston this morning for a conference with all the New England representatives of the Rambler sales and service organization. Mr. Berry has at his fingers' ends accurate knowledge of sales prospects in every territory from Florida to Vancouver and from Mexico to New York. This week he will add to his fund of information that furnished by the reports of Rambler representatives from all over New England, and he will then retire to his room and consider plans for the further extension of Rambler service and sales in this territory. New England people will buy more cars of quality during the coming year than in any previous season," said Mr. Berry.

Sales in this territory of cars selling above $2,500 have surpassed those of any previous year, and also that of the year increased 100 per cent, and other manufacturers of cars of high quality are doing as well. Everywhere I have gone the demand is for the higher priced cars and cheaper cars are gradually being replaced by those costing from $2,500 up for service. The one-year car or low-value car is rapidly being replaced, even on close farms in the vicinity of Boston. In Boston the average price paid is $2,500. The business is exceptionally good in Providence, where the average is above $2,000, and in fact throughout Rhode Island nearly all high grade cars were sold last year, the average in close proximity to city people and fellow owners have become wise to the automobile show season, preferring on the basis of quality, not on the basis of price.

"While in Chicago I met several many Rambler owners and dealers and preliminary reports indicate that the sales this year in the New England shows will show quite a large an increase as during the past year. The Boston show is considered one of the most important as any other in the country, not even excepting Chicago, where the Rambler best all previous sales records by disposing of 181 cars at an average of $2,500 each."

CALLED TO COAST TO IDENTIFY A TRINKET

BURLINGTON, Ia., March 6.—A start for the Pacific Coast has been made by Miss Topping of Burlington, who is accompanied by her mother. Miss Topping had been served with a subpoena to appear in the United States Supreme Court at Los Angeles to identify a silver button alleged to have been stolen from the mail by a messenger under arrest there.

Miss Topping will receive fifteen cents a mile and expenses for the journey.

MARMON TROPHIES

The display of trophies won in contests both on road and track make rather a bright feature of the show. The great legend of cups and other trophies displayed by Frank Wing, at the Marmon booth is one of the greatest of the lot. Joe Dawson, the boy who won the great Chicago on Tuesday in time to catch up with Grand Prize contest, is

RUSTLERS GET AWAY FOR SOUTH TONIGHT

By R. W. LARDNER.

Several hours before tomorrow's sun has risen, unless the sun makes sudden changes in the time table it has been using ever since its birth, Boston will be deserted by Manager Fred Tenney and his Rustlers and the hope of this city will have to depend on valuable telegraph wires for information regarding their baseball clubs.

They have been depending on these wires for news of the Red Sox for some time. It won't be any hardship to do the same in the case of our National League heroes, for there will be more real things of them once they get into uniforms and begin actual work.

The small squad of Rustlers departing from here will carry with it the good wishes of our population. They also will have more confidence than the band that set out from Boston a year ago for the Augusta camp, to prepare for a season that promised disastrous results and fulfilled its promise.

There is a feeling among officials of the club, candidates for places on the team, and the populace in general, that the Rustlers really will make a showing this year and live down the unenviable reputation made in the 1910 campaign.

Tenney Sure to Make Good.

There are reasons for this feeling. The chief reason is Manager Tenney himself. Tenney knows baseball thoroughly and is a born fighter. A fighter is just what is needed on the Boston National League team, and there is sure to be improvement in the work of the team when it is under the leadership of a man possessed of the never-say-die spirit.

Another reason is the clearing away of the dead wood. Some of the men who were loved last year were accused of loafing and showing a disposition to make a joke of the pastime. Now Boston didn't see the joke of having an inferior ball team, a ball team that was bad enough without deliberately making itself worse than it was.

Some of the comedians have been let out. There are enough veterans left to insure stability and it is hoped that the youngsters secured in their places will take it in earnest and give us the best they have.

Get Away After Midnight.

Only a small number of the hopes of the Rustler race will depart from here. The others will join at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and at the permanent camp, Augusta. By Wednesday night it is expected that everybody will be on hand at the Hotel Albion, Augusta, with the possible exception of Peaches Graham, who is a holdout.

There will be no blare of trumpets attendant on the exodus of Tenney's men. Some of the more timid of the club's followers may appear at the South Station tonight to have a look at the small party, and to say fond farewells. Most of the men will be in their berths before 10 o'clock tonight, although the train is not scheduled to pull out until one o'clock.

Manager Tenney will not grieve over the loss of a big squad. He is in earnest about his new undertaking. He will be an impatient person until Augusta is reached and there is a chance to get his charges out on the ball field where he can pass judgment on them.

The first practice is booked for Thursday at noon. The squad starting from here will reach camp Wednesday noon, but will not be required to do any work until the Western division has put in an appearance. But there will be plenty of work from that time on.

The team will be in New York from seven until twelve o'clock tomorrow forenoon. McInnes's team is in Texas, the Brooklyn Dodgers are at Birmingham and the Highlanders in their temporary camp at Virginia Hot Springs, so no one will dispute the Rustlers' right to strut up and down Broadway.

Everything is in readiness for the team's departure. Uniforms, bats, gloves and trunks covered with dust through the long Winter of idleness have been rounded up and checked to the Georgia destination.

Pitcher Neary has taken in an extra supply of liniment and bandages. He will be the busiest man in camp for the first two or three days, for it surely does need a person now to call into play muscles that have been forgotten since October.

Short Time to Train.

Long walks, short sprints and old, reliable "high-low" will be the order for Thursday and Friday. Manager Tenney possibly will get the boys down to more serious work on Saturday and the regulation program will be handed out to males before the end of the week.

"Our training period is short," says Manager Fred. "Therefore, it will have to be hard. We'll be in Augusta a little over three weeks and are sure of this that they won't be three weeks of "rest."

"The men will have to work for all they are worth and three days down to Boston to have a ball team in first-class condition when we appear at the South End grounds on April 12."

RED SOX NOTES

The Red Sox quartette practices daily one hour and then some more. Under the able tutelage of Bradley, the sidewalk star and first sucker, the Red Sox barber-shop harmonizers are rounding into perfect vocal form. Carson would put the ban on spangett and take to the extreme wing on the left if he ever heard Matty McHale cool some of his cane stuff. He has been afflicted with tonsorits ever since he was a youngster, and his friends hope he will recover without an operation. "Buck" O'Brien is handling himself a little better around the bases and slugs real well at the plate. Larry Gardner is the busiest kid, and gets off a line of deep sea gobs whenever he could make a Catrina see him green with envy.

The boys are telling a story on Bill Carrigan, who will do the principal rubbering for the Rustlers this year. It seems that the hotel served some delicious hash, and Carrigan, the boys say, Carrigan took a forkful and slowly munched it between his lower wisdom molars. He turned and said: "Gee, those are the fondest tasting sweet potatoes I ever ate. I wonder if the country girls did with 'em."

"What are you talking about?" laughingly remarked Catrina, one of the college rowlers twirlers; "that is a banana fritter, not a sweet potato."

"Well, I guess I'll have some more," was the lucid reply. "Can you get me some of him the merry rab ha. This is a cross between a sweet potato and hope-to-die story. If you don't believe it, ask Collins.

Thomas, the young catcher drafted from the Oaks in the Pacific Coast League, is in the game at 40 years and thinks a lot a world of speed in whipping them to bases.

Nevertheless, a California boy has surprised his friends with his showing. He has improved considerably since he played around the sand dunes of San Jose.

Ben Hunt who wintered on the coast and who made a remarkable record for himself while playing on the Santa Barbara Club, is a popular chap.

A player on the Red Sox squad just before dinner time placed a large sign on the dining room door, which read: "The manager requests all guests not to throw good food at 'Doc' Green."

* * *

Roy Myers, the University of California twirler who is trying out with the Sox at Redondo, tried to spear a ground ball out in a recent workout a painful injury of his right thumb and was out of the game for a day.

* * *

Cicotte notched upon the field behind Carrigan, with a large California pain dropped over his head singing "Hail to the King." The spectators in the grandstand also greeted the boys as they appeared upon the field.

* * *

"Bud" Smith, the little son of Frank Smith, pitcher enjoys himself as well as his father, by tossing the sphere and batting when the boys warm up.

* * *

The question was asked: "Can a ball player come back?" Carrigan says: "Yes, providing a player takes the best of care of himself."

* * *

"Cupid" Burns, well known follower of the game from Boston, was noticed by the spectators when he umpired at Redondo.

* * *

* * *

"Dee" Green has spent half of his salary in postal cards, sending the same to his Eastern friends.

* * *

Madden, behind the mask and pad, is a demon sending them to bases.

* * *

Perry and Hinnet, the two coast outfielders, are the latest to join Manager Tenney's band run this year. Both are good fielders and can fill the ball back to an accurate throwing range in Jake Stahl style. It is most likely that both of them will get a few of them as substitute fielders.

* * *

Young Harold Janvrin, the Boston schoolboy star, seems to be showing good. He is a fast fielder, a good judge of a ball, a fine batter and can run the bases like a deer.

SCHOOL SQUADS WORK HARD

While Patsy Donovan and his band of a serious handicap this season with many Red Sox are plodding up in Southern California and Fred Tenney and his Rustlers are marking time for their match to Georgia, the schoolboy baseball players of Greater Boston are holding daily practice sessions in the different high school cages in preparation for a banner season up on the diamond. Most all of the high schools have already issued calls for candidates, and those that have not will do so this week.

One week on the school campus is usually sufficient time for a school team to get ready for the fray. The youngsters, unlike their brethren in the big leagues, do not have to work any superfluous flesh, nor are the effects of a Winter spent in lounging around pool rooms, bowling alleys, and places of similar recreation. They are all in form, and nothing inadequately like colts for the words, "Play ball."

The prospects for winning teams are very bright in most of the high schools. With most of last year's crack teams still intact, the battles for the championship titles in the different leagues should be close and interesting.

At Commerce the men have now been working out for nearly a month. Last year the Freeway ball tossers won the championship of the state, and are confident of repetition. The chances of the Commerce nine are very bright, as only two members of last year's victorious nine will be missing from the lineup this season. They are Leo Callahan, all-interscholastic twirler, and "Stocky" Armstrong, who took care of the keystone station. The veterans on hand are Roy Lundin, 1st base, c.; "Sonny" Jim Kennedy, 2b.; Bill Donovan, s.s.; George Stockmeyer, 3b.; Steve Rosiers, l.f.; Johnny Archdeacon, c.f.; Captain Joe Norton, r.f.; and P.

English High will have to work under a serious handicap this season with many of its star players lost by graduation. Coach Jim Cowles will experience great difficulty in filling the places made vacant by the loss of Harold C. Janvrin, who is now holding down the third sack for the Red Sox Yannigans, and ex-Captain Bill Keaney, one of the greatest first suckers developed in interscholastic circles in many years. With a large number of promising candidates working out for places, the wearers of the Light and Dark Blue should be represented by a good team.

With the veteran John Quilty at the helm directing affairs, Dorchester High will make a strong bid to regain its former baseball prestige. Up to the last few years Dorchester won all school baseball titles with clock-like precision. Last year the team was seriously handicapped by the loss of several star men, and was forced to take its place among the also caters. This year Dorchester has some likely boys to pick from.

In the Preparatory League the race should develop into a two-cornered affair between Brookline High and Newton High. Roxbury Latin may do the unexpected, however, as it often happens in baseball.

Among the suburban schools, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Somerville, Cambridge Latin, and Hingham are all making active preparations for the opening of the baseball season. In football and hockey the out-of-town schools always have a little something on the Boston schoolboys, but when it comes to efficiency in the great national game the Boston youngsters must be handed the palm.

Just a little warm weather. That's all the schoolboys ask. Then for the school campus, the old horsehide, the trusty willow, fielding mitts, mask, chest protector and the rest of the paraphernalia which has caused baseball to be placed at the head of American sports.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

HAVERHILL OUT TO MAKE GOOD

To boost the Haverhill New England League Club towards the top of the league is President Clohecy's desire and ambition this year. In view of the fact that the last management was cursed with unsuccessful and left the club in a bad shape, this work will be hard to accomplish.

However, Mr. Clohecy has done it before, and is willing to take a chance on doing it again, he said yesterday. Mistakes have been the chief cause of failure in the past, and while no New England League club has cut out its share of errors, the Haverhill Club seems to have made more than its portion.

The club was left last year with little material in the way of players, and an unsettled financial condition. One thing remained, and is the chief big asset the Haverhill team gives the team by the Haverhill fans. Haverhill is a good ball town, and has always stuck when other cities gave up the ghost.

Lost Money on Trades.

New blood, new money, and a good management, it is believed, will put the team on its feet again. In conversation yesterday, President Clohecy hinted where the Haverhill club lost principal sometime between $5000 and $6000 on trades alone. If the team didn't make money, it was surely and solely because of such acts as these.

The first poor move was in the case of Catcher Jackey Rickley who purchased for $300, and the Haverhill management neglected to reserve him. Philadelphia sold him to Indianapolis for $1,500.

Pitcher Lessard was traded for Pitcher Fullerton, who had a good arm, and proved valueless to the club. Lessard was worth good money.

Through not paying $100 in the McElligue case, Haverhill lost the pitcher, receiving nothing in exchange, when they could have at least secured the draft price.

The club management traded Shortstop Riley for Bill Rodgers, who later proved unavailable, and gave a baseball commission merchant of Pittsburg $250 on the deal. White was sold later for the draft price.

Richard Breen, a good outfielder, was released, and he too, brought the draft price not three months later.

That, in substance, is the trouble with the Haverhill club, and those are the things which President Clohecy says will not happen under his administration.

Expects to Make Good.

"I believe that the club will make good this year," said Dan, yesterday, "and I intend to put the club on its feet once more. We are not in debt to the New England League, and I can say right here that we can pay as our orders, and make money. While I was manager of the team before, I paid our salaries when they were due, and that was the only time that it has ever been done.

"Haverhill is a good baseball city, and will support the team. They have stuck with a losing team, and I consider the city the best in the league when it comes to real support.

"We can live up to the salary limit, as I believe every club in the league will do. And we have a bunch of good new players that will make good.

"A deal was put through yesterday whereby the Haverhill club secures Harry Aubrey of Syracuse. Aubrey played shortstop for the Boston Nationals at one time, and Clohecy is pleased with the deal. Pitcher Mike O'Toole has been picked for Pitcher Newlin of Albany. With a losing team, he won nearly half his games.

RED SOX MANAGER IS DIAMOND STAR

Patsy Donovan.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 6.—Patsy Donovan, manager of the Boston Red Sox, was one of the greatest outfielders the national game ever produced. He covered the right garden for Pittsburg for several years. Later he went to St. Louis and managed the team for three years, going from the Brewster city to Brooklyn, where he managed the Trolley Dodgers for three years.

He went to Boston three years ago and has had charge of the managerial end of the Red Sox since that time.

Donovan knows the game from A to Izzard. He not only thinks baseball in the Summer, but dreams it in the Winter.

When it comes to absorbing baseball he has a sponge beat a sort of a blotter. All baseball knowledge that comes to him when wet is absorbed and dried on him and never leaves him.

He is a sort of baseball classic. He is an excellent judge of the ball player in the raw. He can see the diamond in the rough. And nothing escapes his eye, and then expects them to retain their lessons.

His players learn his system and they know the situation pat. He understands his men and shows every confidence in them. He believes in trusting them. If they go back on him, and they seldom do, he gives them their walking papers without any ado.

He is a man of few words and is a perfect gentleman on and off the field.

The players admire him and do all they can to make his onerous job as easy as possible for him.

The forty-five Red Sox tribe constitutes as peace-loving a family as one could imagine in any branch of life.

Donovan and his men are out to win and Hughey Jennings, Connie Mack, Jimmy McAleer, Bobby Wallace and the other American league field generals will make no mistake if they watch 'em closely.

VETERAN BOXER DEAD AT REVERE

Thomas Earley, a brother-in-law of Jem Mace, the noted English prize fighter, himself an amateur pugilist of much fame years ago and well known in business and sporting circles in Boston, is dead at his home in Revere. He was sixty-seven years old. Earley was born in Nottingham, England, and came to this country with Mace, whose sister he had married, and Joe Goss. The Mace and Goss combination made their first appearance at the Howard Theatre, then under the direction of John Stetson, in 1866. Later on Earley opened his sporting headquarters on Lagrange street, becoming the trainer for Goss and seconding him in his fight with Tom Allen for the championship of America.

SECOND CUT IN HARVARD SQUAD

By E. V. B. PARKE.

The Harvard varsity and freshmen baseball squads are laboring along in the baseball cage on Soldiers Field daily preparatory to the big time when the ball tossers will caper about the greensward in the open. The varsity candidates under the tutelage of Coach Sexton are fast limbering up and scooping the boulders in major league style, despite the fact that they have to work in the semi darkness of the cage.

Particular attention is being paid to men who show any signs of ability for short and third, the two positions which have been left very much open by graduation, but as yet little results have been obtained. No line can really be drawn on the relative merits of the candidates for these jobs until the nine get out in the open and play the positions.

There is a wealth of material for the outfield jobs, and little trouble as far as fielding ability is concerned, should be found in filling the positions. The trouble during the past couple of years with the garden trotters has been weak hitting, and to remedy this as far as possible the nine has been put through a stiff batting practice which at the same time gives the batteries the required workout and experience.

In the catching department, Felton and McKay are developing rapidly both on speed and throws. The former is showing exceptional promise and will be a big addition to the Crimson twirling staff if he can get off to a good start in time to get into the big games after the Spring recess. He has been "in luck" with the college nibee for some time, but is working hard and expects to be in good standing again after the Spring exams.

The freshman are also coming along in great shape. A cut was announced this morning, this being the second one, leaving forty-three men on the squad. The players who have been most prouder at present for the box are Sturgis, a former Groton twirler; Hesbe, a St. Mark's star artist and Hitchcock, who hails from Honolulu.

Wingate, the Exeter nine leader last year, is a comer for third, while Harvey a Hills School man, and a brother of "Cub" Harvey, who held down the centre garden on the varsity nine for several years, shows speed and range enough for the second bag. The outfield candidates at present yield only about three men of promise. They are Grant and Saltonstall, ex-Noble players, and Reynolds, an Andover man.

The freshman squad will now be composed of the following men as a result of the second cut:

ALL-STAR CARD AT ARMORY A. A.

Boxing fans should see some rare good sport to-morrow night at the Armory A. A. Four big inter-city bouts will be staged, and the reputation of the boxers makes it evident that boxing of the fireworks kind will mark the show from the start to the big wind-up.

In three of the bouts Boston boys will clash with boxers from Frisco and Philly. The bouts are limited to ten rounds. The preliminary is slated for the six-round distance, and will be between Young McDonough and Peck LeFavour.

Eddie Murphy of South Boston and Joe Hirst of Philadelphia, two lightweights known for their consistent ring work, meet in one of the big bouts. It should be a bummer.

Jimmy Carroll, who tackles Al Delmont in another of the bouts, is one of the best bantams that the Coast has turned out in a long while. Carroll carries a stiff punch. Boston followers of the game twenty years ago remember his father.

In the other bout Tommy O'Keefe of Philadelphia will mix it up with George Alger. O'Keefe is a nice boy to watch in action, and Alger will need to be in top notch form.

LOCAL GOLFERS IN TITLE PLAY

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 6.—The two big golf events of the week here are played over the links of the Palm Beach Golf Club. Palm Beach, Fla., starting to-day and Tuesday, with the open championship of Florida and then with a day's intermission comes the amateur championship that will be played the last three days of the week and the first two days of next.

For the first event there will be several noted professional starters as well as a large group of the best handicap amateurs who play along the Florida East Coast in Winter.

Alex Smith, the present open champion, who has the Wykagyl club in New Rochelle during the golfing season in the north, is at Belleair in the western part of Florida this Winter, and it is expected that he will be on hand for this Palm Beach meeting. Fred McLeod, the former open champion, who now has the Florida open meeting last year; Jack Hutchinson, from Pittsburg; Tom Anderson, who has his pinched his brother, the late Willie Anderson, at St. Augustine; Tom Hucknall of Wanamoisett; Jim Barnes, Tom Sherlock, Hills and Mimni, Jimmie Norton of Nassau, Arthur Tyng, the local "pro" at Palm Beach; Harold Lyall, who has the Hartford Golf Club course, and Jim Foulis is here during the Winter months; George Merrill, the famed Yale golfer; Dr. Bretton Woods; Fred Hyall of Proats Neck, Me., and Prim Hunter, Jr., of Cleveland, are the most probable starters.

The program consists of an 18-hole best ball foursome on the first day, in which an amateur will play with a professional, and a 36-hole medal play round on the second day for the Florida open title.

Joseph P. Knapp of Garden City, the new South Florida golf champion and the present amateur champion of Florida, will defend his title this year against all comers, and any local golfer with a leg on the handsome cup donated by Richard Peacock of Philadelphia. Sixty-four will qualify for match play, without handicap, in four divisions.

Some of the most prominent entries include C. E. Van Vleck, the former Yale golf team captain; Ralph Hathaway, another well-known college golfer; George Macollin, a former Princeton golfer; J. A. Hamilton, Englewood, who has won many Florida golf titles; H. Chandler Merlon; C. G. Dixon, Spring Haven; V. C. Longley, Wauwatosa, Wis.; Ben Sherrington, Woodland; H. B. Rust, Wannamoisett; John Shepard, J. A. Fisher, W. S. Stafford, Englewood; W. J. and H. Hyde, Jr., Hartford; Dr. Bryant, Southerland, Essex County; C. Thaw, Allegheny, and G. G. Mason, Tuxedo.

SHORTSTOP NICHOLS OF BALTIMORE ILL

BALTIMORE, Md., March 6.—It was announced to-day that Shortstop Simeon Nichols of the Baltimore Eastern League baseball club is critically ill from typhoid fever at his home here.

CLARK SHOWS UP GOOD.

PROVIDENCE, March 6.—Clark, the twirler secured from the Chicago City League by the Grays, who is working out with the major league players at Hot Springs, looks like the find of the season. In a recent game as a pitcher for the All-Nationals he held down the All-American struggers, pitching his way from the mound, besides cracking out a home run and a corking single in two times at bat.

GRAND CIRCUIT PURSES.

DETROIT, March 6.—The early-closing program for the State Fair—Grand Circuit —races in September is announced as follows. The Michigan State, 2:15 trot, $10,000; 2:11 pace, $5,000; 2:11 trot, $2,000; 2:17 pace, $2,000; free-for-all pace, $2,000.

The 2:20 trot, $2,000; 2:06 pace for the class events with probably a big futurity. The free-for-all pace is limited to the Grand Circuit, while the remaining four will be 3 in 5 heats. Entries to close April 11, when horses must be named.

AMATEUR BOUTS FRIDAY.

St. Alphonsus A. A. will hold another amateur tournament Friday night. There will be three open classes for 105, 115 and 125-pound boxers and three specials. Young Hegan and Fallon, rival bantams, will clash in one, Abanian and Muntz in another, and Gilbert Gallant and Ed Flynn in the third.

Sports of all Sorts BY RILEY

PUGILISTIC PROMOTERS NEVER worry much over new stars. As Jim Coffroth said years ago, they seem to drop from the heavens into the laps of the managers. Matt Wells, who now holds the Lord Lonsdale belt in England, is the latest, and it looks as though the boy is going to grace the top of kale before he's downed. Stanley Ketchel blossomed out in a day. He met Joe Thomas at Marysville and fought a twenty-round draw. That was enough. From then on, fame and money simply rolled in on him. Dave Smith, of Australia, made a name in a month. He made half a million in America. K. O. Brown seemed to grow a golden fleece in favor. All he one battle with Tommy Murphy was enough to make him a champ. One-armed Hogan jumped up like a mushroom. He's still up, however. Ad Wolgast came out from a spear carrier to a prima donna in one afternoon. He couldn't draw flies before he met the Dane that afternoon at Point Richmond. The sky is big enough for millions of new stars, but they won't all come down at once, you know, but they're around by the score.

P. L. CALLAHAN, WHO HAS JUST arrived in London with Eddie McGoorty, the Milwaukee welterweight, writes that Eddie may hook up with Harry Lewis in the near future, and if he fails to grab that match will get Jim Sullivan, the new middleweight champ of England. Callahan says that Jimmy Britt is quite a large frog over there these days. "He has a nice look at all the big fights here," he writes, "and brings a party of ladies and gentlemen with him to each show. He is in with McIntosh on the Olympia and on the side has a theatrical booking agency with elegantly furnished rooms right in the heart of London. Jimmy is doing extremely well and wished to be remembered to all the boys."

HARRY COVALESKI, THE BIG HURler from the east misses of Pennsylvania, who stamped the giants' pennant hopes in the Fall of 1909 while a member of the Phillies, hopes to rejoin the big league staff for a few Chattanooga in the Southern League the coming season, but declares his brand of pitching is too much for the minors, although he failed to convince Clarke Griffith of this last Spring. Covaleski has one good point on the diamond. John has signed for a trial with the St. Louis Browns, while Manager Lobert will play with Lancaster in the Tri-State League this year.

SPEAKING OF LIGHTWEIGHTS, HOW about that Frankie Burns person from Fresno? Won on a foul over Gus Hogan and the other night knocked Lew Powell out. Yes sir, they drop right out of the game, they do.

THAT LOOKS LIKE ONE FINE CARD which the directors of the Quincy Rowing Association have arranged for their regatta on Billy Nixe Day. Nixe has been travelling along awfully fast, but he will run up against a good solid proposition in his old rival, Tommy Rawson of East Boston. Joe Geary and Bob Lefavour will mix it up in the semi-final, and Dave Breen and Joe Nelson will go to it on the other bout.

EDDIE COLLINS, THE CRACK SECond baseman of the Athletics, confessed to being superstitious w'orf his teammates started on for Hot Springs. Eddie wore thirteen players in the party so Collins refused to travel with them, and will go to camp alone. The superstitious big leaguers are funny, all right.

BIG BOUT CARDED FOR AUGUSTA CLUB

The match between Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence and Joe Thomas of San Francisco, which will take place at Augusta, Me., on Wednesday night, has stirred up the sport lovers in that State. Promoter Hamilton has made arrangements for special transportation rates from Portland, Biddeford, Lewiston, Bangor and other Maine cities and one of the greatest crowds that ever turned out to see a scrap in that neck of the woods is looked for. Sullivan and Thomas recently met at Manchester, N. H., and after fifteen fierce rounds the bout ended in a draw, while the remaining four will be 3 in 5. Entries to close April 11, when horses must be named.

GRAYS GET M'DERMOTT.

PROVIDENCE, March 6.—Frank McDermott, the Fort Wayne first sacker, who was drafted by Manager Collings last Fall, has been awarded to Providence. The hitch came when the check for $600, mailed to President Carson September 22, went astray. Secretary Farrell, through whose office the check passed, straightened out the matter and the player will report in the Spring.

QUINCY CLUB TO STAGE 3 BOUTS

Another well-balanced card is offered by the Quincy Rowing Association for its next meeting. Three all-star ten-round bouts are on the program, and each looks as if there would be plenty of action provided for the members.

Billy Nixon, who has been winning with surprising regularity lately, will face his old rival, Tommy Rawson of East Boston. Rawson and Nixon are well matched and should put a recently held Billy Allen, the Canadian champion to a draw, something neither of them may do this time. Referee should result.

Joe Geary will tackle Bob Lefavour, who was awarded a decision over Jerry Italone last week in the semi-final bout, while the "Tabasco Kids," Dave Breen of the South End and Joe Nelson of Lawrence, will start the fireworks.

BROOKLYN IS EASY FOR ALL-AMERICANS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 6.—Had it not been for a home run by Hummel the Brooklyn team would have been whitewashed in their game with the All-Americans, the latter team composed of Detroit and Washington players. The All-Americans, as the latter team is called, piled up seven runs in favor. Of the five pitchers of the game were Scahaity's sensational baseball army of Danbury's lot. Hoff in second, cutting off Davidson at second, and Mitchell and Hummel threw from deep centre, pegging Meyers at the home plate. Only three hits were made off Scahaity by Hummel, Crawford and Cutshaw by Dahlgren.

NEW ORLEANS BEATS CHICAGO CUBS, 5 to 2

NEW ORLEANS, March 6.—Superior pitching, timely hits and a few passes aided the local team of the Southern League in taking the first Spring practice game from the Chicago Nationals at Pelican Park. Chance, Evers and Tinker were the lone Bisons to reach first.

FOUR BOUTS ON CARD AT WOBURN TO-NIGHT

Four good bouts have been arranged for the next meeting of the Woburn Athletic Association in Lyceum Hall to-night, the main bout Johnny Gallant takes on Young Jasper of Boston, while in the preliminary will be two local boys, Peter McHugh and Joe Quinn, will be seen in the heavyweight division. Young Kenny of Wakefield and Young Maite of Everett, the semi-final mix-up will be a six-round bout between Mickey Brown of Woburn and Max Kramer of Boston.

KRAMER WINS TIME PRIZE AT N. Y. RUN

NEW YORK, March 6.—W. J. Kramer, Long Island A. C., five-mile champion of America, won the first prize here at the Union Settlement Athletic Club, which had a field of 150 starters, one of the largest fields ever seen in a race of this kind in New York. The distance covered was about four and one-half miles. The best running was done by the winner, Sydney Leslie, who although he covered 2m. 15s. from Kramer, carried himself along so well that the latter gained but thirty-three seconds on him.

ATHENS GIVES YANKS ONE BIG WELCOME

ATHENS, Ga., March 6.—It was a big day for Athens to-day. The whole town, it seemed, was at the railroad depot to see and welcome the baseball players to town to work in the park here this month. Manager Chance, the squad, Harry Lee, the Yankee's trainer, is going to watch over the physical condition of the players.

DETROIT YOUNGSTERS BEAT VETERANS, 7 TO 5

MONROE, La., March 6.—The Detroit baseball team played its first Spring game here to-day, the youngsters being pitted against the older members and winning 7 to 5.

YOUNG GIANTS TURN TABLES ON WACOS

WACO, Tex., March 6.—The young Giants turned the tables on Waco, defeating the Texas Leaguers, 4 to 0. Rudolph and Jenkins did the pitching for New York. Only three hits were made by Waco.

Mutt and Jeff Lost In Smoke of Battle

CAN it be that Mutt and Jeff are incarcerated (good word that) in some Mexican jail? We wouldn't be at all surprised. They haven't shown up or come across with any dispatches since yesterday morning, and some of their friends are worrying. Latest advices from the American Consul state that they will be released for to-morrow's edition, so watch out.

RARE TREAT FOR WRESTLING FANS

Followers of wrestling will have a rare treat Wednesday, when the N. A. A. A. U. championships are held at Lyceum Hall, Woburn. There are about seventy-five entries in the five classes, among them being some of the classiest performers known to the amateur mat game. Harvard, B. T. Y. M. C. A., Boston, Clelsea, Salem, Worcester and Manchester Y. M. C. A. associations, Svea A. C. of Cambridge, Swedish Gymnasium Club Posse, Brockton Gymnasium, Hamlin A. C. of Worcester and other leading athletic and wrestling clubs throughout New England will send their best men and the competition should be the best ever seen in this country.

In the 115-pound class, Sullivan of Salem vs. Bob Patterson of Woburn, John F. Mathieu of Attleboro, and George Lesago of Marlboro are among the likely winners. The 125-pound class, which has the largest number of entries, contains such men as Gus Hakanson of the Swedish Posse Gym., present title holder; John Stetson of Chelsea, Jim Sullivan of Y. M. C. A., John John of the B. T. Y. M. C. A., and Walter Falla of the B. G. A.

The 145-pound class should develop into a hard contest between Dr. W. F. Persall of B. T. Y. M. C. A., the present holder of the title, Tom Nelson of the Swedish Gym. Club Posse, Gus Hellu of the Finnish A. C. of Worcester, W. B. Wile of Harvard and Eddie Anderson of the Salem Y. M. C. A.

In the middleweight class Hugo Bjorkland, Swedish Gym. Club Posse, R. M. Page of the H. A. A. and B. T. Y. M. C. A., Will Barton of the Salem Y. M. C. A., Earl Smith of Portland, and Warren Johnson of Arlington are among the likely winners.

In the heavyweight class are Carl Anson of the B. T. Y. M. C. A., J. J. May of the Viking Club of Roxbury, and Charles A. Hallech of the Chelsea Y. M. C. A., who should be in at the finish. Taking the men from their previous records Anson should win this class.

The tournament will commence at 7:30 p. m. promptly and the men will weigh at 8:45 p. m. Special cars will run from Woburn and connect with cars for Boston.

E. H. S. PICKED TO WIN GAMES

All preparations are now complete for the Boston High School indoor track meet which will take place on Saturday afternoon, March 18, at the South Armory. The event will be the final indoor meet of the season for the youngsters and should produce some rattling good good performances with all of the scholastic runners and jumpers in top notch form.

English High is picked to win. The Montgomery Street School has captured the event ever since the Boston High School League has been in existance, and should repeat this year, the wearers of the Light and the Dark Blue are represented by one of the greatest bunch of track stars in its history.

The real battle will be for second place. Commerce, Boston Latin and Mechanics are pretty evenly matched, and each school is confident of being the runnerup. Local followers of schoolboy sports favor the Warren avenue youngsters to finish second to English.

English High should experience little difficulty in winning the long runs. Allen will undoubtedly show to the front in the mile run, in the one-mile run, while Bill Ferguson is conceded an easy victory in the 100-yard run. Ferguson in this event last season, and judging from the form that he has been showing all season, he is out to repeat.

The 440-yard run should develop into a fine contested affair between Captain Dunphy of the Latin School, Bishop of Mechanic Arts, and Ashley Evans and Sawyer of English High.

Little Willie Gets a Lesson On Profanity

By KENNETT HARRIS

"HEY! What's that?" ejaculated the nice old gentleman, in shocked tones. "What was that I heard you say, Willie? Come right here to me, sir!"

The little boy slowly and unwillingly complied. His face was flushed and he pouted.

"What was that?" repeated the nice old gentleman, sternly.

The little boy hung his head. "I broke the blade of my knife," he said.

"And because you broke it you thought you'd indulge in wicked and profane language, eh? Didn't you, sir? Didn't you?"

"Yes, sir," admitted the little boy.

"I was hoping that my ears had decieved me," said the nice old gentleman, chewing his chinwhiskers.

"Great Scott, Willie! Where do you go next to wind up if you are beginning at this early age? Swearing and cursing with the salt from the surface until it hardly dry on your lips? Breaking into a stream of profanity just because of a trifling little accident that you were more than half responsible for? Why, Willie! What do you suppose your dear mamma will say when I tell her that her little son has been indulging in such language as that?"

"Are you going to tell her?" asked the little boy, in sudden alarm.

An Awful Prospect

"It's my duty to," replied the nice old gentleman. "I don't exactly see how I can sleep with a clear conscience if I keep silence. You wouldn't have me tossing on a fevered pillow and longing for the dawn all night, would you?"

"No, sir."

"There you are, then. And if I tell mamma, she will be tossing on a fevered pillow and weeping scalding tears on it in the morning. It's quite likely that you will do the tossing, too, after she gets through with you. What made you suddy your pure, young mouth in that way?"

"I broke the blade of my knife," said the little boy.

"I know, I know," said the nice old gentleman. "You told me that before. That, int. My nice little grandson saying things like that! I don't know what the present generation is coming to."

"Guess sure things like that," said the little boy.

"That's Different," He Said

"That's different," said the nice old gentleman. "Your father is grown up, and that alters the case entirely. There are many things that your father may do that it wouldn't be proper for you to do. When you are grown up and have little boys and girls of your own it will be high time for you to say 'Scrooze it.' Grown-up people have certain rights and privileges that you haven't. Grown-up people can smoke, and drink whiskey, and pay bonds for horses, if they want to."

"I wish I was grown up," remarked the little boy.

"But, of course, they rarely do," added the nice old gentleman. "But if they do, it's not for you, or kinds like you, to make comments. Bear that in mind, my child. Your father can press his plate twice for pie if he chooses; but it would be very greedy for you to do it. Did swearing in that fearful manner mend your knife blade?"

"No, sir."

"Then, what good did it do?" demanded the nice old gentleman. "If you had laughed and whistled a merry lay, wouldn't that have answered every purpose and made you feel a great deal better?"

"Yes, sir," said the little boy.

"You know that it wouldn't," said the nice old gentleman.

"No, sir."

"Always Tell the Truth"

"Always tell the truth," said the nice old gentleman. "I always did when I was your age. I have to admit that things often happen that exasperate me to point where we forget, for the moment, the proprieties and refinements of the mother tongue. I have been tempted to say 'Gosh-e-mighty!' more than once myself, but then, I am nearly ten times your years. Well, you'll have to use the other blade now and be careful and philosophical."

"It hasn't got any other blade; it's a one-bladder," said the little boy.

"Only one blade to it, and that broken?" exclaimed the nice old gentleman. "You don't say! Well, in that case I don't know but you were rather justified than otherwise, after all. What would you say if I gave you a quarter to get another?"

"Thank you," answered the little boy, promptly.

"Then say it," said the nice old gentleman.

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued)

"O my friend, could he not have stolen Mr. Frew Dale or from my hotel in Aix? Would the loss of a shower be noticed, do you think? How many people in Aix today have had reasons a to bracelet for their luncheon? Bredder. It is not merely the desire of this poor woman which troubles me. We have lost the evidence which she was going to bring to us. She had something to tell us about Celie Harland which now we shall never hear. We have to begin all over again, and I tell you we have on the time to begin all over again. No, we have not the time. Time will be lost, and we have no time to lose." He buried his face again in his hands and groaned aloud. His grief was so violent and so sincere that Ricardo, shocked as he was by the murder of Marthe Gobin, set himself to console him.

"But you could not have foreseen that at 9 o'clock in the afternoon at Aix"——

Hannud brushed the excuse aside.

"It is no extenuation. I ought to have foreseen. Oh, but I will have no pity now," he cried, and as he sinded the words abruptly his face changed. He lifted a trembling forethinger and pointed. There came a sudden look of life into his dull and despairing eyes.

He was pointing to a sidetable on which were piled Mr. Ricardo's letters.

"You have not opened them this morning?" he asked.

Marthe Gobin's Letter

"No. You came while I was still in bed. I have not thought of them till now."

Hannud crossed to the table, and, looking down at the letters, uttered a cry.

"There's one, the big envelope," he said, his voice shaking like his hand. "It has a swiss stamp."

He swallowed to moisten his throat. Ricardo sprang across the room and tore open the envelope. There was a long letter inclosed in a handwriting unknown to him. He read aloud the first lines of the letter:

"I write what I saw and post it to-night, so that no one may be before me with the news. I will come over to-morrow for the money."

A few exclamations from Hannud interrupted the words.

"The signature! Quick!"

Ricardo turned to the end of the letter. "Martha Gobin."

"She speaks, then. After all she speaks!" Hannud whispered in a voice of awe. He ran to the door of the room, opened it suddenly, and, shutting it again, locked it. "Quick! We cannot bring that poor woman back to life; but we may still"—— He did not finish his sentence. He took the letter unceremoniously from Ricardo's hand and seated himself at the table. Over his shoulder Mr. Ricardo, too, read Marthe Gobin's letter.

It was just the sort of letter, which in Ricardo's view, Marthe Gobin would have written—a long, straggling letter which never kept to the point, which exasperated them one moment by its folly and dried them to excitement the next.

It was dated from a small suburb of Geneva, on the Western side of the lake, and it ran as follows:

"The suburb is but a street close to the lakeside, and a tram runs into the city. It is quite respectable, you understand, monsieur, with an hotel at the end of it, and really some very good houses. But I do not wish to deceive you about the social position of myself or my husband. Our house is on the wrong side of the street—definitely—yes. It is a small house, and we do not see the water from any of the windows because of the better houses opposite. M. Gobin, my husband, who was a clerk in one of the great banks in Geneva, broke down in health in the Spring, and for the last three months has been compelled to keep indoors. Of course, money has not been plentiful, and I could not afford a nurse. Consequently I myself have been compelled to nurse him. Monsieur, if you were a woman, you would know what men are when they are ill—how fretful, how difficult. There is not much distraction for the woman who nurses them. So, as I am in the house most of the day, I find what amusement I can in watching the doings of my neighbors. You will not blame me.

"A month ago," the letter reads, "the house almost directly opposite to us was taken furnished for the Summer by a Mme. Rossignol. She is a widow, but during the last fortnight a young gentleman has come several times in the afternoon to see her, and it is said in the street that he is going to marry her. But I cannot believe it myself.

"Monsieur is a young man of perhaps thirty, with smooth, black hair. He wears a mustache, a little black mustache, and is altogether captivating. Mme. Rossignol is five or six years older. I should think—a tall woman, with red hair and a bold sort of coarse beauty.

"I was not attracted at her. She seemed not quite of the same world as that charming monsieur who was said to be going to marry her. No; I was not attracted by Adele Rossignol."

And when he had come to that point Hannud looked up with a start.

"So the name was Adele," he whispered.

"Yes," said Ricardo. "Helene Vaughier spoke the truth."

Hannud nodded with a queer smile upon his lips.

"Yes, there she spoke the truth. I thought she did."

"But she called Adele's hair was black," interposed Mr. Ricardo.

"Yes, there she didn't," said Hannud drily, and his eyes dropped again to the paper.

"I knew her name was Adele, for often I have heard her servant calling her so and without any Madame' in front of the name. That is strange, it is not, to hear an elderly servant woman calling after her mistress, 'Adele.' just simple 'Adele'? It was that which made me think monsieur and madame were not of the same world. But I do not believe that they are going to be married. I have an instinct about it. Of course, one never knows with what extraordinary women the nicest men will fall in love. So that after all these two may get married. But if they lo, I do not think they will be happy.

"Besides the old woman there was another servant, a man, Hippolyte, who served in the house and drove the carriage when it was wanted—a respectable man. He always touched his hat when Mme. Rossignol came out of the house. He slept in the house at night, although the stable was at the end of the street. I thought he was probably the son of Jeanne, the servant woman. He was young, and his hair was plastered down upon his forehead, and he was altogether satisfied with himself and great favorite among the servants in the street. The carriage and the horse were hired from Geneva. That is the household of Mme. Rossignol."

"We Have Them!" He Cried

So far, Mr. Ricardo read in silence. Then he broke out again.

"But we have them! The red-haired woman called Adele; the man with the little black mustache. It was he who drove the motor car!"

Hannud held up his hand to check the flow of words, and both read on again:

"At 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon madame was driven away in a carriage, and I did not see it return all that evening. Of course, it may have returned to the stables by another road. But it was not unusual for the carriage to take her into Geneva and wait a long time. I went to bed at 11 o'clock, but in the night M. Gobin was restless, and I rose to get him some medicine. We slept in the front of the house, monsieur, and while I was searching for the matches upon the table in the middle of the room I heard the sound of carriage wheels in the silent street. I went to the window, and, raising a corner of the curtains, looked out. M. Gobin called to me fretfully from the bed to know why I did not light the candle and get him what he wanted. I have already told you how fretful sick men can be, always complaining if just for a minute one distracts oneself by looking out of the window. But there! One can do nothing to please them. Yet how right I was to raise the blind and look out of the window! For if I had obeyed my husband I might have lost four thousand francs, And four thousand francs are not to be accused at by a poor woman whose husband lies in bed.

The Young Lady in Green

"I saw the carriage stop at Mme. Rossignol's house. Almost at once the house door was opened by the old servant, although the hall of the house and all the windows in the front were dark. That was the first thing that surprised me. For when madame came home late and the house was dark, she used to let herself in with a latchkey. Now, in the dark house, in the early morning, a servant was watching for them. It was strange.

"As soon as the door of the house was opened the door of the carriage opened, too, and a young lady stepped quickly out on the pavement. The train of her dress caught in the door, and she turned round, stooped, freed it with her hand, and held it up off the ground. The night was clear, and there was a lamp in the street close by the door of Mme. Rossignol's house. As she turned I saw her face under the big green hat. It was very pretty and young, and the hair was fair. She wore a white coat, but it was open in front and showed her evening frock of pale green. When she lifted her skirt I saw the buckles sparkling on her satin shoes. It was the young lady for whom you are advertising, I am sure. She remained standing just for a moment without moving, while Mme. Rossignol got out. I was surprised to see a young lady of such distinction in Mme. Rossignol's company. Then, still holding her skirt up, she run very lightly and quickly across the pavement into the dark house. I thought, monsieur, that she was very anxious not to be seen. So when I saw your advertisement I was certain that this was the young lady for whom you are searching.

"I waited for a few moments and saw the carriage drive off toward the stable at the end of the street. But no light went up in any of the rooms in front of the house. And M. Gobin was so fretful that I dropped the corner of the blind, lit the candle, and gave him his cooling drink. His watch was on the table at the bedside, and I saw that it was five minutes to three. I will send you a telegram to-morrow, as soon as I am sure at what hour I can leave my husband. Accept, monsieur, I beg of you, my most distinguished salutations.

"MARTHE GOBIN."

Hannud leaned back with an extraordinary look of perplexity upon his face. But to Ricardo the whole story was now clear. Here was an independent witness, without the jealousy or rancours or Helen Vaughier. Nothing could be more damning than her statement; it corroborated those footmarks upon the soil in front of the glass door of the salon. There was nothing to be done except to set about arresting Mlle. Celie at once.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Girls, Do Not Try to Deceive Your Mother

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GREAT many girls think that notoriety, at any cost, is a desirable thing.

Just remember one thing, girls—that while it is easy to get the public eye it is quite another thing to get out of it.

Years after, when with the circumstances that placed you there dead and buried, people with inconvenient good memories will say, "Do you see that woman? Well, she's the woman who did so and so."

The way to avoid that uncomfortable state of affairs is to keep out of mischief in the first place.

There is a wide difference between fame and notoriety.

The famous person has done something noteworthy.

The notorious person has done something mischievous.

You probably want to marry; all girls do; it is natural, that they should.

Pay the Penalty

It may be that you have done nothing actually wrong—but you have merely been foolish; but you pay the penalty just the same. You will always find men who will encourage you in foolishness of all kinds.

They will laugh with you, and at you, and then transfer their attentions to some other girl.

A man demands that his wife be above suspicion.

Intoxicating drinks help a girl toward notoriety.

They lead her to acts of recklessness, and, under their influence, she does things that no power on earth could urge her to do otherwise.

There is one great remedy for trouble of all kinds, and that is confidence in your mother. As long as you can tell your mother everything that you do, you are quite safe.

The first danger mark is the desire to deceive her.

The first man you meet whom you can not present to your mother is a menace to you.

A Menace to You

The girl who urges you to deceive your mother is also a menace to you; she will lead you into mischief.

The first foolish letter you write to a man is a menace to you. It is all the little acts of foolishness which lead up to the big piece of foolishness which makes you notorious.

You may think that your mother has old-fashioned views on many matters; but she is right up to date, my dear, on what is best for her daughter's happiness. She knows men far better than you do.

Remember that the greatest happiness for any woman lies in the shelter and love of some good man's home and heart, and don't be foolish enough to spoil your chance of winning such happiness.

Old Brass

FOR the amateur collector of antiques it is often difficult to distinguish between a good piece of brass and a modern imitation of the old metal, and if one is so fortunate as to make the correct distinction then one is often confronted with the difficulty of rubbing off the tradish when it is ingrained with stains of old standing.

A recommended mixture which is suited to brass or copper articles, be made of: rottenstone, three-quarters of a pound being made into a powder, with three-quarters of an ounce of gum arabic, with an ounce of oxalic acid, ounce and a half of sweet oil and sufficient water to make a paste. This should be rubbed on with a cloth, and the brass or copper polished thoroughly with a clean cloth and leather.

Old tarnished plate can be cleaned by shredding a pound of good soap into two quarts of water and adding a small piece of potash. This should be whipped with a stick or other soft substance until the froth rises, when the silver should be boiled in the mixture. Afterward rinse in boiling water to remove the soap and finally polished with cotton dusters.

Desperate Desmond

Aren't those Paris Apaches just horrid! Pipe the scoundrels whetting those long sharp knives. What do you suppose they are going to do? Is it possible they would murder an innocent young girl in cold blood? It is not only possible, dear reader, it's extremely probable. Desmond pays the regular rate for work of that kind.

Meanwhile Claude and the gendarmes are swimming about in the flooded streets trying to locate Desmond and his fair victim. They suspect that the villain has joined the Apaches, but they don't know where to find the gang ... and would you think of an American cop who didn't know the hang-out of the worst crooks in his district?

The flood has evidently reached some booze foundry. Those boxes you see floating by contain bottles of absinthe. The stuff tastes something like paregoric, as we have been told, but, oh, what a difference in the morning! The medical authorities are all agreed that absinthe is far more delicterious than ice cream soda. Apaches are not very fond of absinthe, which is another good reason why respectable people like you and us should shun it. Just to get a free drink of this vile liquor the lowlives are even willing to pass up a chance to earn a few dishonest centimes by assassinating fair Rosamond. That shows what an appetite for drink will do.

At the same time, we are rather glad the Apaches did dive into the flood to get their favorite gargle, for otherwise Claude and the gendarmes might have been too late to rescue our heroine and the villain as per schedule. They've got the car dead to rights now if those French cops only hang on to him.

The gendarmes are taking no chances. They have boxed Desmond up in a trunk and are rowing him to the police station. On their way they pass the guillotine on that Claude can see where the villain is to be executed. That is, they think he will, but we don't know. If we did we'd tell you—honest we would. To-morrow's pictures may give us a clew.

Meddling Relatives

By WINIFRED BLACK

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

A young man and woman who had been close friends for five years eloped and were married in Maryland one year ago to-day. They came to this city to reside. The young man was very industrious and anxious to make a home and gain a position.

Shortly afterward the young man lost all his savings through misfortune. The young wife began to grow careless. Her mother became forced to go and live with her husband's people, and wrote letters to her daughter coaxing her to come home, her home being in Boston. In November last a son was born. The husband informed the mother-in-law that her daughter was sick and would wish her to come. The mother refused to come, and kept the news of the birth of the baby from her husband, so she would not have to come. Instead of coming, as a mother should, she sent a letter saying, come home.

When the wife recovered she became homesick, and my friend drew every penny he had to his name and took her home for a visit. After he came back to this city he received a letter from his wife saying she would never come back and it was his duty to go where she was happy. His wife's father and mother dictated all his wife's letters to him, which consisted of information about his son or any news that a wife should write, nothing but come here and live and take me to housekeeping where I am happy.

Would you sue for divorce?

Can he get his baby?

KING EDWARD.

CAN he get his baby?

I don't know the special laws of Maryland on this special case, but unless things are very different in the Chesapeake country from what they are in nearly every other State in the Union, he certainly can get his own child, and he can get a divorce, too, or at least a legal separation, and be rid of this silly little featherhead once and for all.

Ought he to do so?

That rests entirely with him and his own conscience. Does he really want to get rid of the woman who is making him so unhappy, or does he still love her?

Men have been known to love women even more foolish and more stubborn than this one.

What is the matter? Does he tell the whole truth about this affair or is there somewhere in Maryland a sore memory, a bitter jealousy that will not be forgotten? Perhaps the young wife has some very serious reason for refusing ever to go back there to live. If she has, then let the man pay the penalty of his own folly and his own wrongdoing, give up his business and his own old friends and go to his wife and begin life all over again—if she'll let him.

Nothing wrong at all? She's just homesick and wants to make him live where her friends live?

Then she is a vain, self-contented, silly little goose, and doesn't deserve a husband or a baby either, and, as for the mother who is encouraging her in her blind folly, she ought to be let out somewhere into the salt, salt sea and treated to an old-fashioned ducking.

A wife's place is with her husband, and any wife worth having doesn't want to live anywhere away from him.

Stop, Mr. Young Husband, your people. They live in Maryland, too, do they not?

Well, if I were you I'd cut loose from "my people" and from "her people" and I'd beg, borrow or steal the money to get to where my wife was, and I'd say, "Come, Mary or Sallie," or whatever her name is, "come with me. I'm your husband; come, let's be happy together." And I'd carry her away right under the nose of her interfering mamma, and I'd hide somewhere where not one meddlesome cousin or one "interested kinfolk" of any kind, sex or condition could find me, and I'd begin the world, the nice, fresh, wholesome, kindly, friendly, happy world together all over again—just I and little foolish, girlish wife and our little cosypoly of a boy.

And that's what I'd do about it all.

Which Man Should This Girl Marry?

What Would You Do, Sisters, if You Found Yourself in Her Position?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to ask your advice on one of the most perplexing problems that ever confronted any girl.

I am twenty-one years of age and earn $25 a week as a private secretary. Out of this I have to support my mother, who is not very strong; also two younger sisters, seven and fourteen years of age.

About a year ago I made the acquaintance of two young men. Mr. A., whom I love very dearly, earns $26 a week. Mr. B is very wealthy and, while I do not love him, I admire him very much, as he has been very kind to me.

Now, Miss Fairfax, both of these gentlemen have asked me to marry them. If I want to marry Mr. A I shall not be able to do so for at least seven or eight years, as I am going to send my older sister to business school, and it will be fully that time before she is earning enough to care for my mother and younger sister.

On the other hand, if I marry Mr. B he has promised to see that my mother and sisters are well taken care of, and I know he will keep his word. I may eventually learn to love him, as I know he will try to make me very happy if I marry him. Now, Miss Fairfax, the question is: Shall I wait six or seven years, until my sister is able to obtain a fair salary, or shall I marry Mr. B? In any event, I want my mother and sisters cared for as well as I am caring for them now.

I cannot tell my mother what the situation is, as I think she would want us to marry Mr. A. and would tell me she could take care of my sisters. This, however, is impossible, as she is an invalid.

I have no one to go to for advice, and therefore would like you to tell me what is best.

M. E. S.

THE above question is a difficult one to answer.

I would like the help of some of my readers.

She loves Mr. A and if she marries him, must wait seven years for her happiness. She likes and respects Mr. B. and he would marry her at once and help take care of her family, lifting the burden from her young shoulders. What would you do in her place?

The greatest thing to the world is love, but will love survive a seven years' engagement?

Long engagements are hard on both parties.

I know what I would do; but, first of all, I want to hear what you would do.

Perhaps your suggestions may help her more than mine.

Here is a sister asking for help.

Both mothers and daughters should have an opinion on this subject.

Which man would you have your daughter marry?

Which man would you marry yourself?

Dyeing Slippers

FOR white kid slippers which cannot be cleaned successfully after having been previously cleaned, buy a ten-cent tube of ivory black art paint. To one-half cupful of gasoline add enough paint to make fluid the consistency of cream. Apply evenly with a small brush, allow to dry thoroughly, and then polish with any good shoe paste. This does not harden the leather and will not wash or rub off.

Daysey Mayme's New Club

History Was So Full of Slaughter That They Sidestepped It for Bridge

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

NO women ever starts out alone in the pursuit of knowledge.

If she realizes the enormity of the crime of wasting time in frivolity she doesn't retreat to some quiet corner text-book in hand, determined to learn; she gets out in a public place and blows a trumpet, and calls the sisterhood together.

"We are waiting our time and fat ents," she will proclaim. "Let us organize a society for the purpose of acquiring knowledge."

It was this prevailing trait in women that led Daysey Mayme Appleton, some weeks ago, to issue a clarion call, and the result was that a number of women met at her home one afternoon, armed with encyclopedias, text-books, note books and pencils, prepared to master English History.

A Glorious Idea

"It will be a glorious thing," said Daysey Mayme, who had left off her puffs to give herself a more intellectual air, "to become known as Great Authorities on all matters historical. Perhaps we may, some day, write a history that will become a universal text-book, and a model for accuracy."

The society was organized under the name of the English History Research Association, and Miss Elizabeth Mary Appleton was elected president.

"Of course, that isn't my name," she explained to her parents, "but it sounds so much more like books than Daysey Mayme."

So many of the people of Merrie Old England, in the early days, were beheaded, quartered or drawn, or burned alive, that President Appleton felt when preparing her club papers as if she had mixed kings and queens with receipts for cooking hash and toasts and giblets, and that is one reason she appeared at the second meeting with a puffs to every inch of her scalp and proposed a game of bridge.

"It will make us forget. She said, 'that we have been spending our time in a historical slaughter house."

The End of the Research Society

And so it happened that at the next and every ensuing meeting the only kings and queens mentioned were those turned out of any woman's crime than falling into the hands of the opponent. The English History Research Association had bloomed into a bridge whist club, and plain Elizabeth Mary Appleton with a forehead that bulged with information had gone back to over-curled and over-puffed Daysey Mayme.

Another ambitious effort to become earned in the women's way of organizing that had fallen by the wayside and perished, and the customary bridge whist club has risen from its grave.

MRS. ALLCASH, who has not as yet got over the novelty of riches, is not inclined to admit the fact. On the contrary, it is her great desire that the society with which she is now entitled to mix, by virtue of her husband's wealth, shall think she was born in the purple.

Recently she was at a big dinner party, and as she was being piloted from the drawing room to dining room she noticed a marble bust on one of the pillars in the hall.

"Do you know who that is?" she inquired of her cavalier.

"That is Marcus Aurelius," was the answer.

"Oh! is it now?" ejaculated the lady. "But can you tell me," she added, "whether it is the present marquis or the late marquis? I get so mixed up with dukes and things."

"SHALL I hang up a stocking for Lee Toy, too, father?"

"Certainly, my son. And now good night and let Lee Toy put you to bed!" Lined up that the captain and his Lamb & Co. their little nose, and left the marked the night at a Christmas swagger.

"Come here, Lee Toy," said the little boy, after the Chinaman had undressed him and put him to bed. Lee Toy obeyed, knelt beside the bed, and folding the little man's hands between his own.

"Lee Toy, I forgot to play Samson and the Philistines with you to-night."

"Thank you, Missa Hally," replied Lee Toy, meekly, for, as the representative of the Philistines, Lee Toy did not enjoy the game as much as Harry, who was fond of singing him with the jaw-bone of an ass—that is, with anything that was handy.

Are you sure nobody will take the stockings off the mantelpiece to-night, Lee Toy?" "Sure, Missa Hally."

"And did you hang up a pair for yourself?"

"Yes, Hally; and one for Dammy."

Then, after a pause and a yawn, the little boy said, "D'you think, Lee Toy, if I wish very much for something that Santa Claus will give it to me?"

"Of cawse, Hally; he heap good."

"D'you think, Lee Toy, he could get a pair of wings into my stockings?"

"Why, yes, Missa Hally, if they have spots on um—blue and gleen and red spots, with white stripes."

"Oh, thank you, dear Lee Toy. Now you may say my prayers for me." And in the curious, breathless fashion in which little boys say their prayers, Lee Toy rushed through the Lord's Prayer as he had often heard the child say it, finally winding up with the usual "and make me ugoolli boy. Amen."

After a few minutes' silence, the little voice asked, sleepily: "Did you say the wings must have blue and green and red spots, Lee Toy?"

"Yes, Missa Hally—and white stripes."

"Thank you, Lee Toy; I had forgotten the stripes. Good night."

When the little boy was fast asleep, Lee Toy went out on the dark porch, and said, softly, "Mah Lee and Wau Shan, Sons of Shameless Mothers! go home and ponder the strength and wisdom of a little child."

And then returning to the little boy's room, he stretched himself in front of the fire, and took comfort in a pipe of opium, after the manner of his kind.

CHAPTER VIII.

How One May Fly Without Wings

"I'M sorry for your domestic troubles," said Mrs. Loomis to the gentleman with whom she was dancing at one of the great houses on Jackson street; "you ought to get rid of your Biddy and employ a Chinaman. We have one and he's simply splendid—devoted to my little chap —can cook a salad to perfection—and my little son is teaching him the rudiments of Christianity, and so we are spreading the Gospel under our own roof-tree."

"Yes; and the heathen in his blindness probably steals your loose cash for his self and your husband's letters for the benefit of his brother highbinders."

"What! Lee Toy? Never!"

The gay young woman's chatter and laughter were stopped by the sudden pealing of the bells throughout the city, announcing once more "glad tidings of great joy." The ball-room was hushed, whilst a carillon in a neighboring belfry tolled out the joyous strains of "Adeste Fidelis."

"O, come, let us adore Him, Christ, the Lord," sang Mrs. Loomis, softly, accompanying the music of the bells. She had scarcely finished when there loomed forth the signal that told of a fire in the district in which she lived. Captain Loomis had mounted the signal also, and in less than five minutes they were driving rapidly to the scene of the fire. As they turned into their street they saw that it was, indeed, the house that was ablaze; and on the roof of the doomed building and against the sky-line was Lee Toy walking to and fro with a little child in his arms.

Doomed by Fire

The crowd made way in hushed awe for the carriage, as word went down the line that it contained Captain Loomis and his wife. And when they could go no nearer to the burning house, the Captain, supporting his wife, watched the impending catastrophe with dry eyes and aching heart.

So fierce was the heat that the men with the scaling ladders had been driven away from the house, and the doom of the man and the child seemed to be sealed.

What had happened in the house and what was now taking place on the roof was this: Lee Toy awoke at midnight to find the room full of smoke. He instantly realized that the house was on fire, and darted out of the room to look for an avenue of escape. Then, finding that the basement and the lower story were ablaze, and that his only escape was by way of the roof, he hastily tied a handkerchief round the little boy's eyes, and, wrapping him up in a blanket snatched it from the bed, he ran up the stairs with him and stepped out of a window on to the roof—only to find that the fire escape ladder had been removed! He could hear the blowing of the fire alarm and the clatter of the approaching engine; and while the fire department was rapidly getting into action, he sought the front portion of the roof. The spectators cheered him as he came into view, while the ladder escape was pushed near to the burning house and unlimbered.

"What is the matter, Lee Toy?" asked Harry, who was now awake and trying to remove the bandkerchief from his eyes.

"Hush, Missa Hally! Santa Claus he come, an' he put yo' wings on yo'—my! he fly way, an' give yo' wings to the little boy across the lead. Shut yo' eyes now."

"And do they hear the fire alarm when Santa Claus comes, Lee Toy?"

"Of cawse, Missa Hally; sho' time."

The hook-and-ladder men had almost reached the top story of the building when a fierce gust of flame, belching through the windows, drove them to the ground again; and a wail of despair rose from the spectators. Lee Toy took the blanket off the little boy and tossed it into the street; instantly four strong men, standing as close to the burning house as they dared, held it taut; and the crowd yelled to Lee Toy to jump.

"Missa Hally, Santa Claus want yo' fly now. Don't you be flightened!"

"Have the wings got the right spots Lee Toy—red, and green, and blue?"

"Yes, yes!—and white stripes. Now: one—two—tlee—an' way you go!"

The men with the blanket were fully twenty feet from the burning building so—to add impetus to the child's flight —Lee Toy leapt as he threw him.

The Dying Chinaman

The crowd cheered as the men with the blanket caught the little one—but Lee Toy did not hear them.

"He may possibly come and speak before he dies," said the young surgeon at the Receiving Hospital to Captain Loomis, who sat beside the dying Chinaman. Another Chinaman, whose eyes were hard to meet, and who had been admitted as Lee Toy's nearest of kin, watched at the foot of the bed with folded arms.

Presently a woman, on an errand of mercy, began to sing, "Hark, the herald angels sing," somewhere in the ward. Lee Toy opened his eyes slowly, and, recognizing the Captain, he smiled.

"How Missa Hally?" he inquired, feebly.

"Safe, and quite well, dear Lee Toy."

Then after a pause, the dying Chinaman said: "You send me back to China?"

"Surely, Lee Toy."

Presently Lee Toy fumbled painfully in one of his pockets, from which he drew a package, and bidding it out to the Chinaman who stood at the foot of the bed, he said in his own tongue: "Wau Shun, consider the strength and pity of an innocent babe, who would doubtless have no give thee this package—and thy life!"

Then, as his eyes began to glass and his breath to come in short gasps, Lee Toy whispered: "Tell Missa Hally I got my wings, too—with red, and blue, and gleen spots—and white stripes——"

And then, on a Christmas morning, did Lee Toy, highbinder, pass into the presence of Him who had also loved little ones—and who forgives much to those who love much.

CHAPTER IX.

That Two Eyes Are Better Than One in the Dark

"THOU hast the writings of Lee Toy Wau Shan?" asked Sam Lee of his brother highbinder, as the latter issued from the Receiving Hospital in San Francisco.

"Verily, or thou hadst heard my dogs bark within," replied Wau Shun.

"And Lee Toy?"

"Lee Toy died babbling of wings, and of the White Babe whose life he saved from fire this day at the price of his own, and whose father stood beside him weeping like a woman."

"Was ever the like seen before!" exclaimed Sam Lee. "That Lee Toy, the bravest of the brave, and who promised to be the keenest hatchet of our tong, should fall his brethren, and break his oaths, and worship the White Babe whose abduction he had undertaken—and that the babe's father should weep for one of our people!"

"Ay, and, what is of more importance, that Lee Toy should have given me the writings that would have hanged us who confessed his passing! Eh, Sam Lee?"

"Yea, Wau Shun; and compassed also the hanging the Quong Lung—nay, turn not so suddenly in a sacred lane, my brother, for I have but one eye, as thou knowest, and that cannot abide swift movement in the dark on the part of a man who's life is forfeit!" and Sam Lee drew a darkling revolver from his blouse.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

A report has been in circulation recently to the effect that if Standard Oil is found guilty 1,200 other corporations will have to be dissolved. The report is foolish.

$ $ $

Since there must be tariff reform, there could be no better time for it than now, when supplies of material that might be affected are small. The country is producing and importing enough to carry it from day to day, and new tariff rates could be put into effect without causing losses of importance to importers or home manufacturers.

$ $ $

There are favorable factors in the situation, but it is impossible at this early stage of the confusion to weigh their influence properly. One thing is very important is that securities are now in the hands of persons of power in the financial world and of investors who have paid for them and have held them in expectation of just such developments as have actually come about. The stock market is, therefore, scare-proof to a considerable extent.

$ $ $

Official announcement of an extra session of Congress together with the fact that the Supreme Court may hand down decisions in the Oil, Tobacco and Corporation Tax cases any Monday will give the Street uneasy sessions. Whether these influences contain the makings of a higher or a lower market cannot be known until the decisions are rendered and Congress has announced its program. If the new Congress merely passed the Democratic measure and adjourns, it will do no injury to the stock market. If its leaders make immediate announcement that general tariff revision will not be undertaken, that will nullify the effect of the session on stock prices.

$ $ $

If the extra session is to be used for investigating the New York Stock Exchange and the large industrial combinations, or if tariff reform is attempted, there will be general liquidation of investment stocks. This selling will be of two kinds. Many stockholders will unload in the honest belief that tariff reform will injure the large corporations. The other kind will be by persons who are confident that the first days of selling will take place and will dispose of their own holdings, believing they will be able to repurchase them at lower prices, being all the time confident that no permanent injury will be done to the corporations by tariff reform.

$ $ $

As to possible investigations, there is as much to hope for as to fear. It is known that the Department of Commerce and Labor has made several exhaustive investigations of the big corporations, notably of the Steel Trust. It is known that many of those have brought out very favorable facts from a "Street" point of view, but official announcements have never been made of them. Action by Congress might force from the administration official announcements covering the points in dispute.

$ $ $

It is known that the Steel Trust has been found to be legal in the opinion of the Department, and the mere official announcement of that fact would have a stimulating effect on the market. The government has asked for the dissolution of the Standard Oil and American Tobacco companies, not because they are corporations or holding companies, but because it is alleged that they are conspiracies to oppress the public.

$ $ $

Report has it that the Rockefeller element has been selling both stocks and bonds and piling up cash in immense volume, but it is not asserted that it has been going short of the market. It may be that, seeing trouble ahead, it has put itself in a position to support prices in case they show a tendency to go down too far. Such a course would not be entirely philanthropic. Anyone with the ready money is entitled to buy stocks when they are cheap.

$ $

Specialtyists, the market has undoubtedly discounted many of the adverse and uncertain features of the moment. But there is little stimulus to inaugurate a big movement for a rise. The market is apparently left to take care of itself. There are those, however, who believe that we are in an accumulative period, and they believe that the result of this accumulation will make itself manifest later.

STOCK MARKET OPENS STRONG

NEW YORK, March 6.—Despite the possibility of United States Supreme Court decisions in the anti-trust cases to-day, the stock market showed no trepidation at the opening. The initial tone was steady. While some of the standard railroad shares were unchanged from Saturday's close in the initial quotations, others opened with an advance.

Reading opened unchanged, St. Paul was up ¼, Atchison ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅛, Steel ¼, while Canadian Pacific opened unchanged as did Central Leather and U. S. Rubber. The copper group did not share advance. Amalgamated being off ⅛.

Despite the firmness of the market trading was dull, brokers showing a pronounced feeling of caution. The loss of Union Pacific was soon recovered. The calling of an extra session of Congress had been discounted and had no effect.

The fourth market opened regular. The strength of the New York market was reflected in the London market. American railway shares being above parity, although there was a feeling of caution which kept trading somewhat restricted. Also slight gains were felt in some quarters that bond issues might exceed the limits of conservatism.

MRS. W. L. DOUGLAS, DEAD IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, March 6.—After an illness of several years, Mrs. William L. Douglas, wife of the former Governor, is dead. She was sixty-two years old. Mrs. Douglas became afflicted some years ago, and her husband's wealth was at once drawn upon to provide every possible means for her recovery. For late years almost every known specialist had been brought to Brockton to do what he could.

Death came in the West Elm street home of the Douglases, where they have lived for many years. On the same street live the two remaining daughters of Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Charles F. Richard and Mrs. Harry B. Russell. With their father, they were at the bedside.

FIVE VESSELS OVERDUE HERE

Five vessels, four from trans-Atlantic ports, are overdue here, and news is anxiously awaited by their agents. The Silvia of the Hamburg-American line left Hamburg February 19 and is three days overdue. The Gloriana, Captain Davis, is two days overdue, having left Fowey, England, on the same date. The Athelo from Hong Kong and other Asiatic ports, is a day late, as is the Galileo, Captain Watson, which left Hull, England, February 16. The Chesilton, Captain Heckens from Honduras and South American ports, is also a day late.

BRANDEIS URGES ECONOMY BOARD

NEW YORK, March 6.—In order to make the railway systems of the country pay full value to investors, Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, in an argument before the Railroad Securities Commission to-day, advocated a new government department. He would establish a bureau of railroad costs and an experimental station in railroad economics. The work of this bureau would be published, as are agricultural reports at present, for the benefit of the railroad management.

This would not only promote economy, in his opinion, but would also bring to the front abuses and life-saving inventions which now cannot be exploited because the carriers cannot dispose of their inventions.

CLONMANY MEN TO BUILD CHAPEL

A meeting of the former residents of Clonmany, Ireland, was held last night in Rongnan Hall, Charlestown, for the purpose of listening to the report of the committee appointed some time ago to solicit subscriptions for the rebuilding of the old chapel. The report showed that considerable interest has been taken in the movement, and the sum to be collected, together with the amount which will be raised by the rumble to be held at a later date, insures that the chapel will be rebuilt.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 71

Friendly Advertising

A famous advertiser years ago said that he would rather be damned with faint praise than not to be mentioned at all. The modern advertiser won't go quite so far as this, but the up-to-date business man realizes that some publicity is necessary to the success of any business, in fact, advertising is nothing more or less than printed word of mouth commendation extended to a market of thousands where actual word of mouth commendation would only reach hundreds.

For instance, three gentlemen were dining together not long ago in a Western city; one was a manufacturer, another a wholesaler, and a third a lawyer. They were discussing the poor condition of business, and the lawyer turned to the lawyer and asked him how he found things.

"Bad," was the reply of the lawyer. "I haven't had a new client I don't know when. If business doesn't pick up, things look very dubious to me." He got up before the meal was over and silently left. After he had gone, one of the two men turned to the other and said: "It's too bad he hasn't any clients. He certainly knows as much law as most of the lawyers and is a mighty good chap. Why can't we tell our friends what a good fellow he is and a good lawyer, too, and advertise him to them in such a way that if they have any law cases they will consult him."

The plan was adopted, and the two men from that day on began to talk about the ability of the lawyer, what a fine character he had, how considerious and able in the handling of his cases.

Six months or a year later one of the two men met the lawyer and said to him, "How's business?"

"Excellent," was the reply. "I've got more clients than I can attend to."

Thus was what word of mouth advertising did for the professional man. Advertising will do the same for a product or the name for an institution that deals in services of any kind. It imparts a knowledge of the goods or a knowledge of the quality of the services. The man or firm that doesn't avail himself or itself of this method of creating new business is losing an opportunity to widen its market.

Advertising is far-reaching in its effect. You never can tell where it will produce results and to what quantity. It's the new method of getting business.

In the advertising field the newspaper occupies a unique position because it visits a person oftener than any other form of publication. Every day it can lay the business man's news of goods before its readers. News of goods is effective advertising.

Stereotyped advertising never pays, but a presentation of fresh reasons at regular intervals why goods should be bought or services should be taken advantage of is the modern method of good advertising just as the newspaper is the most effective form of any advertising.

One of the biggest markets in America is the New England market, particularly that within ten miles of the State House, Boston. The newspaper which has the largest circulation in this territory is the Boston American. When you stop to consider that it reaches almost 400,000 people a day you cannot fail to conclude that it can take your story to those readers in the most effective way. We welcome an opportunity to take this matter up more in detail with you. It matters not whether you are a small or a big business man. We think we can tell you of something that will be of real aid to you.

RAILROAD MEN IN CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Presidents of Eastern railroads and members of the Interstate Commerce Commission went into conference here to-day over the recent rate decisions of the commission. When the session began it was understood that the railroad men would announce their intention to take no appeal from the ruling of the commission and would arrange for withdrawing the schedules of increases which would have gone into effect had not the commission decided against them.

The railroad chiefs present were W. C. Brown, New York Central; F. D. Underwood, Erie; James McCrea, Pennsylvania; Daniel Willard, Baltimore & Ohio; and C. S. Mellen, New York, New Haven & Hartford.

After the conference had been in progress for some time a rumor was circulated that the Eastern railroad executives had sought a compromise, seeking to have the commission's decree made effective only during the balance of the present year, this plan being based upon the uncertainty of the future. The magnates have asserted that an increase now considered unwarranted would be fully justified by future conditions.

BREWERY MEN GRANTED RAISE

One thousand members of Boston Brewery Workers' Union received an increase in wages to-day, with an eight-hour day for good measure, under an agreement with the officers of their union and proprietors of breweries. These men have been working on a nine-hour basis.

Full details of the new wage and working condition agreement will not be made public until a meeting of the union next Sunday. The increase, however, said to be a substantial one, and the eight-hour day is assured to every brewery worker employed in the city. Negotiations also are under way to secure corresponding betterments for all men connected with the business locally, but who are employed outside the breweries in other branches of the work.

E. F. Ward, local agent of Brewery Workers' Union No. 29, and International vice-president of the general union, with Konrad Yetter of Brewery Workers' Union No. 34, and M. J. Hines of Bottlers' & Drivers' Union No. 122, constituted the joint board which conducted the negotiations with the proprietors.

FAVORS BOSTON FOR BIG LINERS

Adl L. Best, American representative of the Hamburg-American line, the largest ship company in the world, said today a representative of this newspaper in New York, that Boston is a natural port at which to land passengers from Europe than Montauk Point.

The Hamburg-American line is now building the giant steamer of the world. It will be 900 feet long and they can't find any place on the Manhattan or Jersey shore to dock such a monster. Secretary of War Dickinson is to hold a hearing in Washington at which an extension of the New York pier will be discussed.

"I do not think," said Mr. Boss, "that Montauk Point is a practicable port for the largest transatlantic passenger ships. True, it offers no shelter from the ice in Long Island Sound, but I think on that score Boston would be the better port, for, owing to the ice of Boston, passengers could make a rail journey of 221 miles in a few hours.

"If passengers were landed at Montauk Point their weight would be lessened and baggage was examined, and in the case of 3,000 persons this delay would be a serious inconvenience. The men with a satchel would have to wait for the man with twenty trunks. The men who kept the waiting until all the customs officers have completed their work and then a long ride to Manhattan, where the passengers would again have to undergo the trouble of taxicab or car.

"At the present time 10 per cent. of our outward freight is handled by truck and 90 per cent. by rail. Of the inward freight 40 per cent. is lightered and 60 per cent. trucked. I am sure that there could be no lighterage whatever then, again, who will pay the railroad fares on the Long Island Railroad—the steamship companies or the passengers?"

Mr. Boss did not answer the question which he asked of himself.

The Dreaded Infantile Paralysis

Just What Is Known About It. Information from the Rockefelle Institute.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

A father wrote to this newspaper asking for information concerning the greatly dreaded disease, infantile paralysis.

Thanks to the researches of the Rockefeller Institute and to Mr. Rockefeller's wise philanthropy, the questions that so many parents ask are here answered on the highest possible scientific authority. The questions and answers as published are prepared for this newspaper by the scientists of Mr. Rockefeller's admirable institution of research.

QUESTION. What is infantile paralysis?

ANSWER. It is a germ disease that attacks the spinal marrow and brain, and by merely injuring or by totally destroying the delicate tissues causes either a temporary or permanent paralysis of the muscles.

QUESTION. Is the germ of infantile paralysis known?

ANSWER. The germ has been known for a little more than a year. It is so excessively minute that the most powerful microscope fails to reveal it, and yet there are accurate methods through the employment of which the nature and presence of the germ have been determined with certainty. The proof that infantile paralysis is a germ disease and almost all our accurate knowledge concerning the nature of the disease have been secured through experiments on animals, and could probably have been obtained in no other way.

QUESTION. Where does the germ reside?

ANSWER. The germ of infantile paralysis is not known to reside anywhere in nature except in connection with human beings, who either have had or have been in contact with some one who has had infantile paralysis, or in relation with some object in close association with patients suffering from the disease.

QUESTION. How is the disease spread?

ANSWER. Infantile paralysis is spread by persons sick with the disease or by some one who has been in contact with a patient suffering from the disease. The evidence at present available points to the fact that the germ of the disease can be carried by healthy persons who have come in contact with the sick, who themselves will not contract infantile paralysis, but who may transfer the germ to other healthy persons who will develop the disease.

QUESTION. How does the germ enter the body?

ANSWER. The germ of infantile paralysis enters the brain and spinal cord chiefly, if not exclusively, by way of the nasal passages. In the course of the disease the germ is also thrown off from the brain through the nose and mouth. Hence, protection can be best secured by disinfecting or destroying the secretions of the nose and mouth of those ill of the disease, and by preventing the contamination of persons or objects with these secretions. Especial pains should be taken to maintain in a state of cleanliness the hands, nose and mouth of all children exposed to the disease, either directly or indirectly.

QUESTION. For how long a time is a patient in danger of spreading the infection?

ANSWER. This question cannot be answered with absolute precision at present, but it is believed that during the first three or four weeks of the disease the danger of transfer is greatest, and, hence, patients should be carefully isolated during this period and the discharges from the nose and mouth carefully disinfected or destroyed for this period and, if possible, for many weeks afterward. There is reason for believing that even after the acute symptoms of the disease have passed the infection may in some instances be still transmitted by the patient by means of the nasal secretions. It is for this reason that the secretions should be cared for over a longer period than is embraced in the acute stages of the malady.

QUESTION. What are the main sources from which infection is acquired?

ANSWER. Infantile paralysis is chiefly a disease of children, but it sometimes attacks adults. Since the germ causing it is carried by those having been ill, as well as by persons who have been in immediate contact with the patients, it is not surprising to find that the beginning of many epidemics have been traced to schools where many children are assembled; but any considerable gathering of persons, which includes many children, who are brought together during the prevalence of the disease, may be the means of spreading it widely. Thus it has been observed that country fairs, Fourth of July celebrations and like events have all proved to be such centres of distribution of the infection.

QUESTION. What is the period of greatest prevalence of the disease?

ANSWER. Infantile paralysis as an epidemic is a Summer disease; that is, almost all cases arise in the Summer months, and by far the greatest number in July, August and September. However, the disease does not wholly disappear at other seasons, but a small number of cases arise in the Spring and Fall months, and even in the Winter months. Whenever a case arises, whether in Summer or in Winter, it should be isolated and treated with great care and promptitude to avoid the infection of others.

QUESTION. Is infantile paralysis a new disease?

ANSWER. Infantile paralysis is not a new disease, but the epidemics of it are new to this country. The disease has arisen in this country from time to time for almost half a century, but in very rare instances have any considerable number of cases been grouped together until within the last three or four years. The present epidemic first appeared about Boston and New York about three years ago, and has gradually, continuously and insidiously extended over North America from ocean to ocean and from Canada to Cuba. Prior to this period the epidemics were limited to Norway and Sweden, where they have been prevailing regularly for more than a quarter of a century. The present epidemic in America is part of the general epidemic, or pandemic, as it is called, of the disease affecting a large part of the civilized world. The disease is prevailing in many European countries at the present time, as in the United States and Canada.

QUESTION. What are the available means of combating the disease?

ANSWER. At the present time there is no specific remedy or cure for infantile paralysis. The disease once established cannot, therefore, be controlled by the application of any remedy known to medical science. Luckily, the disease is not a highly fatal one, although it is one of the saddest of diseases because of the large amount of crippling it causes. On the other hand, the outlook has been greatly brightened by reason of the recent knowledge which has been acquired concerning the nature of the cause of the disease and the mode of its transmission. This knowledge permits the application of intelligent preventive measures, which, if effectively employed, will serve to diminish the number of persons affected with it. The most scientific, as well as the most humane, method of dealing with any disease is to prevent rather than to attempt to cure it. Hence, the effort to control this terrible disease should be in the direction of prevention. The various States are making a determined effort to deal with the malady through prevention, since they have required notification and quarantining of the disease.

Extravagance and the Increased Cost of Living

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

PEOPLE'S tastes have outgrown their means of satisfying their tastes, and that condition of things accounts for a very considerable amount of existing poverty.

We are all of us willing, or ought to be willing and glad, to help those that are necessarily poor.

This article deals only with the case of those who are not necessarily so.

Very much of what is called "straitened circumstances" comes from expending so much money upon what is unnecessary as to leave too little to pay for what is necessary.

I am not extemporizing, but know perfectly well what I am writing about, having learned it from observation and experience both. A considerable proportion of those who call themselves poor would be able to live, not in affluent, but comfortable, circumstances, at any rate in tolerable circumstances, if they were willing to live as our fathers lived; but they are not.

They ingulge themselves in extravagances that their fathers would not have thought of allowing to themselves or to their children. I know of a family, consisting of father, mother and four children. There was no servant employed. The work inside and out was all done by the household. No one thought anything about an eight-hour day.

Knew How to Make a Dollar Go Twice as Far Then.

With the head of the household it was as often twelve and fourteen hours as it was eight, and the same was true of his wife. Revenues were small, but the man and his wife were good financiers and knew how to make a dollar do two dollars' worth of work.

The house and tables were furnished with a sufficiency of the necessaries of life, but with none of its luxuries, except possibly once a year. The diet was so simple that most of the children living heretofore would have resented it, but it was wholesome, and sturdy appetites made up for the lack of jam, ice cream and the whole catalogue of delicacies.

Molasses-and-water was the only approach to intemperance in which the children were allowed to indulge. Notwithstanding the meagreness of revenues and the burden of feeding, rearing and educating a considerable family, the father paid his taxes without "sweating off" [illegible] over and above what he felt like meeting, gave with an unstinted hand to educational and religious interests, and when he died left a very respectable little property to his children.

Extravagance and Waste Now.

The family life was maintained in the distinct recognition of the principle that, in the final issue, there is a great deal of difference between coming out at the end of the year twenty-five dollars to the good and coming out twenty-five to the bad.

And now to broaden out our discussion a little; it is reckless expenditure that constitutes a large factor of what we call hard times. Our national bill for unnecessaries is enormous, and although people in ordinary circumstances are not able to plunge into colossal extravagances, yet even the inordinate expenditure of the wealthy is, after all, a good deal of it, a draft upon the purses of those in straitened condition.

Jewelry dealers, it is reported, imported during the year 1910, cut and uncut, precious stones and pearls to the value of about $45,000,000.

Almost $100,000,000 Spent for Gifts Last Christmas.

The chief of the Agricultural Department Bureau at Washington estimates that the Christmas gifts bestowed last Christmas amounted in value to $95,000,000. The habit of bestowing love gifts on December 25 is a beautiful feature of Christmas life, but a tenth of a billion is a good deal of money.

In the year 1910, according to the American Tobacco Journal, 8,844,537,000 cigarettes were made and sold in the United States, which is to say that there was an average use per capita of 100 cigarettes for every man, woman and child in the country, all of which means not only a silly and aggravated waste of money, but a wicked expenditure of health, of body and mind.

Some facts of interest, pathetic interest, have been obtained from a gentleman who is making a close study of the liquor problem and who may be considered as an authority upon matters relating to the use of liquor in this city. In concluding his letter written in reply to my inquiries he writes:

"A carefully compiled estimate makes the liquor bill of the entire country for 1909 to be $1,850,000,000."

These are all high figures and would be immensely increased were there to be added all the vast sums that are expended for extravagance in dress, table supplies and house furnishings.

The purpose of this article has not been to argue for a limitation of expenses to the bare necessities of life. We are justified in living comfortably if we have the means.

But comfort is not extravagance, and expenditure becomes not only impoverishing, but immoral when laid out in luxuries that we should be just as well and fully as well without.
